ETNA VILLAGERS PANIC WHEN VOLCANO ERUPTS

CATANIA, Sicily (UPI)—A series of violent explosions rocked the Etna volcano today, sending a thick column of white and black smoke thousands of feet into the sky.

The blasts and smoke touched off panic in mountain-side communities on this Mediterranean island off the foot of Italy.

There was no immediate indication of a flow of lava accompanying the explosions.

Bulldozer Kills Minister In Civil Rights Protest

SPACE STATION MUST GO ZANZIBAR INFORMS U.S.

ZANZIBAR (Reuters)—President Abeid Karume today told American charge d'affaires Frank Carlucci that the American Project Mercury station must be removed from the island before the end of the month.

Karume said the movement must be made in the interests of the defence and security of Zanzibar.

He told Carlucci the action was the result of a statement made by American ambassador to Kenya, William Attwood, while in New York, which was clearly designed to bring about conflict between Zanzibar and the rest of East Africa.

Attwood told a press conference in New York last Thursday that China and East Germany were trying to turn Zanzibar "into a kind of non-African state to be used as a staging base for political manoeuvres" on the continent.

The Mercury tracking station in Zanzibar was established in 1960 as one of a series across the globe to assist in tracking the projected manned orbit of the earth.

Tragedy At Site Of School

CLEVELAND (AP)—A white minister, demonstrating with a civil rights group, threw himself under a self-unloader tractor at a school construction site today and was crushed by the treads of the big earth-moving machine.

Police said the man, whose chest was crushed, was dead when he reached Lakeside Hospital. They identified him as Rev. Bruce W. Klunder, Baker, Ore., who joined the staff of the Student Christian Union in the fall of 1961.

After the accident picketing stopped and so did movement of trucks and heavy equipment, but some shovelling continued.

The driver of the tractor, identified by police as John White, 33, Mentor, Ohio, said his attention was distracted by demonstrators at the site.

CROWD OF 200
A crowd of about 200 had gathered at the site of a new elementary school at Lakeview Road and Saywell Avenue on the east side about 12:30 p.m. to protest start of construction.

The protesting groups claim building a new school on this site will perpetuate what they describe as "de facto" school segregation in that area.

Less than an hour before the man was killed, police hauled away four men who had thrown themselves in front of the wheels of a cement truck. Some cans and bottles were thrown during this demonstration which occurred outside of the school site.

Monday, when the first demonstration took place, 21 demonstrators were arrested.

ROUGHED UP DRIVER
Police said that just before White's tractor, a front-end loader, crushed the man, several of the demonstrators had jumped on the moving vehicle and roughed White up.

As word of the accident spread through the shocked crowd, the demonstrators quieted down considerably. A hurried call went in for additional police to augment a contingent of more than 30 who were on hand when 32 sign-carrying pickets began their march.

Fourteen helmeted mounted police had opened a path for four cement trucks to enter the site before the first flareup occurred. When the fifth truck tried to go in, four men from the crowd of spectators threw themselves in front of its wheels and were carried away by police to one of several waiting paddy wagons.

Steel Giants Indicted On Price Fix

NEW YORK (UPI)—A federal grand jury today indicted eight major steel companies and two officials on charges of conspiring to fix prices by eliminating competition in the $3.6 billion carbon steel sheet industry.

The indictment was the result of an investigation started two years ago after the late president John F. Kennedy forced the steel industry to rescind a $6-a-ton price increase. It was the biggest anti-trust action since 29 large electrical companies were indicted on price-fixing charges in 1959, resulting in the sentencing of seven officials in 1961.

Pleading was set for April 21.

The indictment charged that meetings were held at the Biltmore and Sheraton hotels in New York to establish and carry out the price-fixing agreements.

Named were: United States Steel and James P. Barton, its assistant general manager; Bethlehem Steel and W. J. Stephens, its former assistant vice-president who now is president of Jones and Laughlin Steel; National Steel, Great Lakes Steel, Jones and Laughlin, Armco Steel, Republic Steel and Wheeling Steel.

Three other companies were named as co-conspirators but were not indicted. They are Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co., Pittsburgh Steel Co. and Granite City Steel Co.

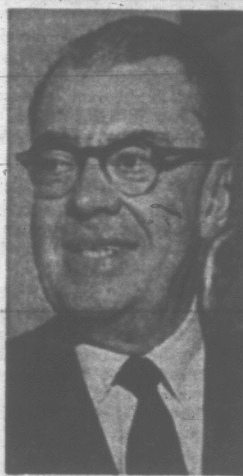

The indictment did not accuse the companies of fixing basic prices of sheet steel. It said only that they agreed on charges for so-called "extras" included in the price paid for specific orders.

These extra charges are for sheets of particular dimensions, gauge, quality, metallurgical content or processing requirements.

FORCED SHOWDOWN
The industry's attempt to raise the basic price of steel in the first week of April, 1962, brought about a showdown between Kennedy and U.S. steel board chairman Roger Blough.

Blough announced after a Kennedy blast at U.S. Steel and

PAUL MARTIN

Columbia Payment Greater

By ALEX YOUNG
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—External Affairs Minister Paul Martin today said Canada will get $100 million more for Columbia River development than the U.S. was prepared to pay 16 months ago.

He disclosed that the Americans made an offer to Canada in December, 1962, which came to about 3.75 mills per kilowatt hour for downstream power resulting from Canadian development of the international river.

The price settled on in the Canada-U.S. Columbia Treaty and its adjustments (4.4 mills for the power, or 5.3 mills if flood control benefits are added), was worth $100 million more to Canada, he said.

Mr. Martin made the statements in testimony before the Commons' external affairs committee. He appeared as the first witness as the committee began what is expected to be a lengthy and exhaustive inquiry into the treaty.

In launching the inquiry, committee chairman John Matheson (Liberal—Leeds) announced that David Fulton, justice minister in the former Conservative government and the man who negotiated the original treaty, would be invited to testify. Mr. Fulton is now B.C. leader of the Conservative party.

OTHER WITNESSES

Others to be invited to appear are: B.C. Attorney-General Robert Bonner, B.C. Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston, B.C. Hydro co-chairman Hugh Keenleyside, representatives of the Alberta and Saskatchewan governments—on the question of proposed Columbia diversion to the prairies, and four engineering firms which have done Columbia work.

In arguing in favor of the Canada-U.S. deal, Mr. Martin attacked those who claimed the treaty was a "sell-out." They were using a general term to hide any intelligent examination of what the treaty was designed to do, he said.

If the treaty was a sell-out by Canada, he said, it was just as accurate to say it was a sell-out by the U.S., because Canada derived benefits from it, too.

Mr. Martin predicted that the Columbia development, combined with the B.C. government's own Peace River power project, would "usher in a program of development and industrialization that will have the greatest beneficial consequences for B.C. particularly, and for Canada as a whole."

It was an undertaking that would take its place alongside

CNR Sets New Volume Mark

OTTAWA (CP)—The publicly owned Canadian National Railways did more business in 1963 than ever before, achieving a record $800,000,000 in gross revenues on its railway, highway, hotel and telecommunications operations, CNR President Donald Gordon informed the Commons today.

In his annual report, tabled in the Commons by Transport Minister Pickersgill, Mr. Gordon said the CNR had a net income of $21,190,774 on its 1963 operations but debt charges pushed it into the hole.

MOTORISTS VICTIMS ON LAKE MARACAIBO

20 Die as Ship Hits Bridge

(Times News Service)

MARACAIBO — Radio reports today said at least 20 persons were feared dead or missing after an oil tanker struck and destroyed an entire section of the new $75,000,000 bridge across Lake Maracaibo in Venezuela Monday night.

The reports said the tanker Esso Maracaibo collided with the bridge.

Reports from the scene said an unknown number of cars fell into the water and at least 20 persons were feared dead or missing.

Preliminary estimates of damage to the bridge exceeded $2,000,000.

Soldiers, police and volunteers were searching the lake waters for survivors.

None of the 36,000-ton tanker's all-Venezuelan crew was hurt, although great chunks of concrete from the overpass fell on the vessel's bow causing it to list heavily.

The tanker struck a bridge piling near Punta Iguana on the east end of the 5½-mile bridge, Latin America's largest, as it was heading out of the lake.

The Esso Maracaibo is owned by the Creole Petroleum Company, a subsidiary of Standard Oil of New Jersey, chief American developer of Venezuela's oil industry on the eastern shore of Lake Maracaibo.

Follow U.S., K Advises

MORTONVASAR (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev told Hungarian agricultural experts today not to boast about their achievements but to adopt some American farming methods.

The Soviet leader, on the eighth day of an official visit to Hungary, told the experts they should, for example, grow sweet corn as the Americans do.

"... They the Americans do it better and they grow much more than we Russians do," Khrushchev said.

"They can it and make good meals out of it. Let us do the same and let us produce more sweet corn for human consumption and not only for fodder."

MASSIVE SEARCH has been launched for Kenneth Edwards, two, of Downey, Calif., who disappeared Sunday on the Mojave Desert, northwest of Lancaster, Calif. (AP Wirephoto.)

SECTION of this 5½-mile bridge across Lake Maracaibo, in Venezuela, was wiped out by heavily-loaded super-tanker similar to that shown above. Ship struck piling on east end of bridge, knocking out 1,500-foot section and plunging cars into water. (AP Wirephoto.)

'BARBARIC AND PAGAN'

British Minister Attacks Modern Funeral Customs

NOTTINGHAM (Reuters)—Rev. Robert Duce, well-known British television broadcaster on religion, today attacked in his parish magazine Britain's "barbaric and pagan" funeral customs.

The Congregationalist minister condemned black cars, top hats, ornate coffins and "quite senseless" embalming.

"The way we perpetuate and linger over all the various stages of the burial ritual is primitive and quite unnecessary. Even the sending of flowers has become a mockery because they remain contained in cellophane packets—entombed in fact," he added.

WIRETAPPING BECOMING MORE COMMON

Little Sentry, Tiny Tattler Hard at Work

VANCOUVER (CP)—A retired RCMP sergeant said today wiretapping equipment is extensively used by RCMP and Vancouver police and by private detectives and individuals in divorce cases and in business and industry.

Ernest Nuttall, 63, whose testimony helped acquit John Wasylenchuk of Burnaby, B.C., of second-degree murder charges in Seattle last week, said his own telephone was tapped.

"People have no idea of the extent of wire-tapping today," he said in an interview. "They would be amazed."

Nuttall said: Police secretly have telephone company officials make records of phone conversations.

Tiny microphone trans-

mitters—some bearing such names as "Little Sentry" and "Tiny Tattler"—are used to bug hotel rooms;

Induction coils put on or under telephones permit conversations to be recorded;

Spies eavesdrop on people at home by running wires off the house telephone lines. A Vancouver newspaper says most of the 11 private investigators listed in the Vancouver directory are equipped to do wiretapping jobs. It says some even advertise "finest electronic equipment," "photo recording and electronic recording equipment" or "secret recordings for evidence."

Nuttall said Canada lacks adequate legislation restricting wiretapping.

He said he was "thunder-struck" to discover when giving a deposition that was used in the Wasylenchuk trial that his telephone had been tapped in the 1950s when he was being investigated by the RCMP at the request of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

He said he was also convinced that his telephone was tapped in the last month.

He said he was always against the use of the equipment. The RCMP had used it mostly on drug and security cases. RCMP and city police forces had men who spent most of their time on wiretapping. Occasionally they would ask a private firm to do some of the work.

One investigator said it is common for businessmen who suspect pilfering on the part of employees to bug the premises. The employees' homes may even be bugged.

The man was also quoted as saying he knows of cases elsewhere in Canada where one manufacturer spies on another to find out about new products.

If they do away with the Senate there won't be as much Canada for Quebec to break away from.

Th' mark of a real Victorian is that he takes this kind o' weather as his nat'l due.

Kin it be that Mister Khrushchev is emergin' as a friend o' th' West?

THIS WORLD OF OURS

People and Things

NEW YORK—A luxurious co-operative apartment house has rejected the application of Peter Lawford and his wife, the former Patricia Kennedy, because of his profession and her politics.

The co-operative's five-man board reconsidered the application of the late President John F. Kennedy's sister and brother-in-law Monday night but one member reportedly refused to drop his opposition to the couple because Lawton is an actor and his wife a Democrat. Francis R. Masters, chairman of the board, would not make public any details of the situation.

However, socialite Charles Amory, whose 16-room apartment the Lawfords wish to buy, resorted to the city commission on human rights to find out if the apartment board had the legal right to blackball the Lawfords because any of the tenants objected to having an actor and a Democrat in the building.

Stanley H. Lowell, chairman of the commission, told Amory that the board apparently does have the right because the law says only that no one can deny living quarters to a person because of "religion, color or national origin."

PASADENA, Calif.—Stark Rex Norris, 25, died in St. Luke's Hospital Monday from a bullet wound in the side of his head. He was listed as a victim of "Russian roulette."

Witnesses told police that Norris, of nearby Sierra Madre, had placed a single bullet in a .32-calibre revolver Sunday night, spun the cylinder, placed the muzzle against his head and squeezed the trigger.

On each of 14 tries, the hammer clicked harmlessly in one of the five empty chambers. Then on the 15th try, a bullet smashed into his head.

NEW YORK—Time magazine says President Johnson—gunned his cream-colored Lincoln up a long Texas hill and the driver of an oncoming car veered off the road.

Newsmagazine carried a similar account of Johnson's driving over Easter weekend, when he gave newspapermen and newspaper women an impromptu tour of his ranch.

Asked about newspaper reports that he drove up to 90 miles an hour, Johnson told a press conference last week he was unaware he had ever exceeded Texas' speed limit of 70. Time says Johnson told three newspaper women and a male reporter in his Lincoln, while other reporters and photographers followed in five other Johnson-owned vehicles.

"The whole caravan jounced at high speeds across a pasture, zig-zagging around dung mounds and clusters of fat white-faced cattle," Time said.

TOKYO—Mitsuyoshi Yoshida, 62, an innkeeper here, said today he has donated 100,000 ($277) for Alaskan earthquake relief because the American Red Cross helped him in the great Tokyo-Yokohama earthquake of 1923.

"I have never forgotten the kindness shown me by the American Red Cross in 1923 when I needed help," he told A. G. Klamke, Red Cross director here, to whom Yoshida made the donation. He said the American Red Cross gave him food and building materials after his home was destroyed.

HAMILTON, Ont.—Frank Johnstone is 101 years old. He says the secret of long life is contentment. When asked about it he said, "I've never thought of it but I reckon I'm content. I haven't relatives and I never bother anybody, but I still got a lot of friends."

Johnstone celebrated his birthday Sunday.

A veteran of three wars, he still manages to remain active despite his years.

He rises at 7 a.m. each day, has porridge, toast and coffee for breakfast, cleans his room, takes a morning walk up town for coffee and a chat. He then returns to his room for a nap.

Johnstone served in the Riel Rebellion, the Boer War and the First World War. He was wounded at the Battle of the Somme.

He lost five sons in two world wars. Three were killed in the First World War and two died in the Second.

VERNON—William Boyarchuk of Salmon Arm found himself behind the eight-ball Monday.

The 23-year-old man appeared in magistrate's court charged with the theft of an eight-ball from a local pool-room Saturday.

Boyarchuk pleaded not guilty and his trial date was set for April 14.

BATH SPA, Eng.—Mrs. Helen Tarry, who never missed a day off for illness, retired as a high school teacher nine years ago at the age of 81.

She became so bored with her retirement, she took a new job when she was 85—as an $11.20 a week seamstress mending towels and sheets.

With her 90th birthday coming up next Sunday, Mrs. Tarry is still doing it, 22 hours a week and her attendance record is still 100 per cent.

Greek Paper Demands Attack on 'Rebels'

PRODUCT OF B.C.

Throughout his submission, Mr. Martin carefully and repeatedly indicated that the treaty, whatever its defects, was primarily a product of the B.C. government.

This was because, he pointed out, the B.C. government owned the resource at one point.

"The treaty and protocol represent the best possible arrangement from Canada's point of view. This arrangement will serve the national interest; at the same time it reflects the wishes of the province where the river is located," he said.

Mr. Martin said he could see only two arguable points against the treaty:

1. That the High Arrow dam would force relocation of many people;

2. That Canada didn't get the best possible financial return.

He said he felt "deep sympathy" for people in the Arrow Lakes region, but argued that "High Arrow" was an integral part of the development; Arrow Lakes residents would be "properly compensated."

The question of too-little financial return—wasn't demonstrable, Mr. Martin added. It was at this point he disclosed the U.S. offer of December, 1962.

NICOSIA (AP)—The leading Greek-Cypriot newspaper Eleftheria today calls on the Cyprus government to launch an all-out attack on the Turkish-Cypriot "rebels" to restore law and order on the island even at the risk of a general war.

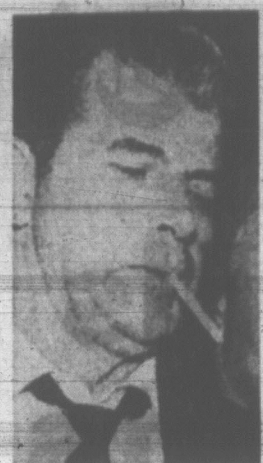

The paper complains that President Makarios' government has been confining itself to a "mere defensive action" in the face of a well thought out Turkish plan to partition the island.

Eleftheria says: "Counter-attack is imperative. Counter-attack should be aimed at the restoration of the territorial integrity and political independence of the island with the whole people by the side of the security forces, with women and children evacuated to safe places."

Meanwhile, United Nations officials opened negotiations today for a permanent truce between Greek and Turkish Cypriots in northwest Cyprus as police sought the killers of two Turkish Cypriots.

STEEL

One by one, the other steel companies also rolled back in the face of Kennedy's strong stand. But a federal grand jury was empaneled April 13 of that year to look into possible collusion.

The grand jury dissolved March 19, 1963 without action but it had developed the leads which resulted in creation of another grand jury last Oct. 16. It was that grand jury which handed down the indictments today.

SIX-YEAR PERIOD

The eight companies indicted today account for about $2 billion of the annual domestic sheet steel business.

Carbon sheet steel, which comprises for about one-third of all finished steel mill products in the U.S., is widely used for automobile bodies, washing machines, refrigerators, office furniture, kitchen cabinets and other such products.

The indictment said the price-fixing conspiracy began at least as early as 1955 and continued until at least 1961.

The grand jury charged that the conspiracy also included agreements on uniform standards for existing carbon steel sheet products and for new products to be introduced on the market.

The conspiracy deprived the public of the benefits of free and open competition, the indictment charged.

Maximum penalty for Barton and Stephens would be one year in prison and a $50,000 fine. Each of the corporations would be subject to fine of up to $50,000.

Campaign Against Juvenile Problems

VANCOUVER (CP)—A drive was launched Monday to organize police and civic, government and voluntary agencies to tackle juvenile delinquency problems in the city.

A meeting of 33 agencies and police set the new plan in motion by naming a committee to investigate co-ordinating police and various groups in youth work.

SIX MONTHS FOR ESCAPE

Carlow Accuses Colquitz Guard Of Beating Him

The prisoner who broke out of Colquitz Jail—and said he did so to bring attention to bad conditions there—was given a further six months sentence in County Court on Monday.

Frank Carlow is now back in the institution on Wilkinson Road. From there he will go to Oakalla Prison in Burnaby and then it will be decided where he will serve his sentence.

But before he was taken back to Colquitz Carlow let off another blast about prison conditions.

He told Judge Montague Drake he had been beaten by a prison guard recently.

He said the guard hit him after he "said something wrong" during a telephone conversation with his lawyer, Jack Gatehouse.

Carlow alleged the attack occurred since his re-arrest after he tried to have his lawyer obtain medical attention for him.

Crown prosecutor Dutton Walker told Judge Drake that the attorney-general's department will investigate this latest complaint by Carlow.

Carlow escaped Feb. 28 and gave himself up next day to free-lance photographer Jim Ryan and Times reporter Desmond Bill. His story of jail conditions was reported in the Times.

Judge Drake said Carlow's charges did not mitigate his offence in breaking out.

Carlow alleged the attack would be better and there would be "more freedom."

But he claimed, the officers at Colquitz took away the shoes he had brought from Oakalla and his family mail.

"I could tell from the men there that there was something wrong," he testified.

Carlow said that Richard Rodriguez (who escaped with him and is still at large) told him conditions in the jail were "bad."

Carlow said he asked to be returned to Oakalla jail but his request was refused.

"You had already decided to escape and the conditions in the jail had nothing to do with it," said crown prosecutor Walker.

Carlow replied that there had been no investigation of these conditions as the result of his statements to the Times.

'Said Something I Shouldn't'

He said that, after being refused medical attention, he asked permission to phone his lawyer (Mr. Gatehouse) and was escorted to the telephone by "an officer."

"I may have said something on the phone I shouldn't have," he said, "for I was taken from the room and beaten by another officer."

Jim Ryan, free-lance photographer, said Carlow phoned him around 3 a.m. on Feb. 28 saying he wanted to give a story to the newspapers about conditions in the Colquitz jail.

Later, in company with Times reporter Desmond Bill, he went to a place on Millstream Road to meet Carlow.

"He told us about conditions at the institution," Mr. Ryan said, "and the general consensus I got was that things there were not as laid down by the penal code."

Mr. Ryan said Carlow told them there was homosexuality among the guards.

Mr. Bill corroborated Mr. Ryan's account of the interview, adding that Carlow told them he needed medical treatment for migraine headaches.

Carlow said he had asked for treatment at the Wilkinson

PERJURY CASE

Judge Rules Farris Must Stand Trial

TORONTO (CP)—A defence motion to kill the double perjury indictment against Ralph K. Farris, of Vancouver, was unsuccessful today at the opening of the Vancouver financier's trial in the Ontario Supreme Court.

Mr. Justice Dalton Wells refused the dismissal motion made by defence counsel Joseph Sedgwick of Toronto, who contended the indictment was faulty.

The 53-year-old Farris, president of Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company, has been charged as the result of evidence he gave before 1958 and 1962 Ontario government inquiries concerning the disposal of NONG stock when the company was obtaining municipal gas franchises in Ontario in the 1950s.

CITE INDICTMENT

The indictment alleges he falsely swore "to the effect that" he was unaware of the disposition of a block of 14,000 shares and did not give instructions for the disposal of 600 shares alleged to have been distributed among some municipal officials.

Mr. Sedgwick argued that the words "to the effect that" were too loose, but special prosecutor Harvey McCulloch of Hamilton held successfully that the indictment should stand.

During argument on Mr. Sedgwick's motion, the prosecutor told the court that witnesses to be called at the trial will include Mr. Justice Leo Landreville of the Ontario Supreme Court, who was mayor of Sudbury when that city granted NONG a natural gas franchise and who received NONG stock after he went to the bench in 1956.

Carlow had admitted he contemplated breaking out on Feb. 16—the day he arrived—because he didn't like the conditions, the detective said.

Spanish shipyards in 1964 are building 16 merchant ships totalling 42,200 gross tons for Norwegian shipping companies.

Disgusted 'Vikings' Set Long Ship Afire

TUNIS (AP)—The Long Ship, vowed to build another ship and a copy of Viking vessels, ended its U.S.-bound voyage in flames Monday. Six irate adventurers decided to burn it rather than turn it over to Tunisian authorities.

A pursuing boatload of Tunisian police and customs men did not interfere when Robert Marx, 29, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and his five European crew members set fire to the 72-foot craft.

The Long Ship went down two miles off Bizerte, where Marx docked last week and tried to sell the ship—after leaks and other defects made it unfit for further sea duty.

He decided to burn the ship after Tunisian officials told him he would have to pay an 80-per cent import tax to sell it. Since it would take a month to get the necessary licence, they advised him to turn it over to the Tunisian merchant marine.

Marx and his crew set out from Yugoslavia last month to try to prove his theory that the Vikings crossed the Atlantic long before Columbus. He

'CHINA OFFERS BIG MARKET FOR CANADA'

HONG KONG (Reuters)—Alvin Hamilton, former Canadian agriculture minister, said today China offered a big potential market for goods from Canada and urged his countrymen to "get there and talk business."

"I believe China is interested in almost all the things that Canada produces," he told Reuters in a telephone interview.

Hamilton, who recently completed a 16-day private visit to China to discuss techniques for increasing Sino-Canadian trade, warned that the market would develop on competitive lines.

DOCTOR HARD AT WORK

Argentina Seeks Cure for Slump

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Dr. Arturo Illia, the country doctor who became president five months ago, still is searching for the medicine needed to pull Argentina out of its slump.

"He is Mr. Good who does nothing to cure his people. But his defenders, such as Illia's political expert Ricardo Balbin, reply: 'The government has made undeniable positive steps forward.'"

At work at 8 a.m. six days a week, the 63-year-old president seems to be one man who is keeping his head amid new outbursts of political wrangling and growing labor unrest.

He is moving slowly, but he hasn't backtracked once thus far—not from pressures applied for foreign oil companies whose multi-million-dollar contracts he annulled Nov. 15, and not from the military who learned he means to keep civilians in control. He proved that by firing his air force secretary for disobeying orders.

Economically, Argentina's $3,000,000,000 foreign debt and generally rundown business condition need much more treatment and rejuvenation that could be administered since Illia took office.

Balbin claims these accomplishments since Illia took over:

—Workers in the government now are beginning to get their cheques on time.

—The national currency, the peso, has held firm without controls on foreign exchange.

—Rates on electricity, gas, line, telephones, transportation and other state-operated services have not increased.

—Plans have been laid to curtail living costs and increase employment.

U.K. Rejects Arms Demand

GENEVA (AP) — Britain today rejected the Soviet Union's demand that virtually all major weapons be destroyed in the first stage of world disarmament.

Minister of State Peter Thomas told the 17-nation disarmament conference such a measure would clearly upset the military balance, would be nearly impossible to verify, and would therefore be a grave security risk.

"So long as the Soviet government insists on this proposal agreement will continue to elude us," Thomas said.

FREE-FOR-ALL PREDICTED ON KNOWLES' BILL

Senator Fights Back Against Abolition

OTTAWA (CP)—The House of Commons today tackled a private member's bill to abolish the Senate.

The debate will likely be a free-for-all lasting for precisely one hour—but without any vote one way or the other on scrapping the 102-member upper chamber.

The debate follows the bill's stormy introduction Monday by New Democrat Stanley Knowles over Conservative opposition.

It is set against a backdrop of a dramatic weekend when one Conservative senator, M. Grattan O'Leary, rebelled against what he felt was a betrayal of the rules and rights of the Senate.

Senator O'Leary, 75, president of the Ottawa Journal, refused Friday to waive Senate rules for quick approval of a government loan to bail out the bankrupt unemployment insurance fund.

His action—taken, he said, on a question of principle—forced the Unemployment Insurance Commission to delay the mailing of about $1,900,000 in cheques to some 36,000 jobless workers Monday.

APPROVES THE BILL
After hearing the eloquent defence of senatorial rights from Senator O'Leary, the Senate gave its final approval Monday night to the emergency loan, part of a $130,000,000 money bill.

The measure was promptly given royal assent. When Senator O'Leary blocked the government's money bill Friday, Knowles, 55, American-born former United Church minister, hurriedly submitted his bill to amend the British North America Act wiping out the Senate.

When it was brought forward Monday for first reading—normally a formality—the Conservative opposition demanded a recorded vote on whether it should be introduced at all.

Former Commons Speaker Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) argued the bill was unconstitutional and out of order. "To concede that the Commons could legislate the abolition of the Senate must lead to the equally absurd proposition that the Senate could legislate the abolition of this chamber," he declared.

GRATTAN O'LEARY
... integral part

"It is repugnant, sir."

Fifty-four Conservatives voted against giving leave to introduce the bill for first reading—with 104 Liberals, New Democrats, Social Crediters and Creditists uniting on the other side.

The bill was put at the top of the list of some 75 private members' bills for debate today.

Most private members' bills came up for debate during hour-long periods set aside for such a purpose in the Commons. Often they are debated to the end of the hour without a vote—"talked out" in parliamentary parlance—and then dropped to the end of the list. They rarely emerge from debate again.

Meanwhile in the upper chamber, Senator O'Leary heaped blame on the government for allowing the unemployment insurance fund to "sink into disaster"—then to come to the Senate at the final minute of the 11th hour with a cry of emergency to make a quick loan.

"I do not rise to apologize for, to recant, or to retreat one inch from the course which I took last Friday with respect to this bill."

He charged that the government, as in the verse about the king of France, had marched senators up Parliament Hill all during what was supposed to be an Easter recess, then marched them down again—without doing any business.

It was irrational and fantastic, a contempt of the rights of Senate, a travesty of the legislative process.

"This Senate is an integral part of Parliament, with well-defined rights, powers, duties and privileges," he said.

"If we here, in this House, forget or ignore those rights, if we permit others to trample on those rights or to despise them, then we condemn this House to a place of inconsequence, a place for only ceremony and ritual, a place with no meaningful legislative existence in this land. Doing that, we declare that we ourselves have no right to sit here at all."

If the Senate is treated with contempt, as a second chamber without worthwhile powers, then Mr. Knowles is right "and this Senate should be abolished," he added.

If some people were deprived of an unemployment insurance cheque for a single day, he said, it was a small price to pay for the assertion of the rights of the Senate and of Parliament.

The Strangers

THE NEW INDUSTRIAL world of automation poses a special problem for the workman who has not been trained to cope with the complex equipment and processes of our era. He must be aided to educate himself, to prepare to take a place in an unprecedented world which almost overnight leapt from handwork to machine production, and now is passing from brain direction to the automatic control of computers and electronic relays.

Every highly industrialized country today is faced with the social problem posed by this advanced and inevitable stage of the industrial revolution. And such has been the speed of the later development that we can only assume that the momentum will continue, that more and more machines will be devised to perform more and more tasks which have always been considered the special field of the highly trained human eye and hand.

Obviously, the opportunities for routine human labor are going to continue to decline in number and the degree of sophistication is going to increase. The individual may be hard put to find his place in this new environment.

An almost exact parallel is to be found in the plight of the so-called underdeveloped nations. Like the unskilled man, they stand in the doorway of the twentieth century and ask for a place in its complicated environment. Without help to enter they must remain outside — needing, resenting and eventually, in some manner, retaliating.

The answer to their problem is the same as that to the problem of the untrained man: funds, not merely to keep them alive as though on an international dole but to enable them to gain the education and the machines by which they can win a place among the world's productive nations.

It will profit the individual and his country little if, having been helped to an education, he is not employed. In the same way, to assist a primitive nation to a position where it can produce competitively but then refuse to buy its goods would be an exercise in frustration. Foreign aid is not enough if it does not help the recipient country to produce for its own wants and for others. On a higher scale of living, its people will provide a market for the more advanced countries' goods — but they will not be able to buy those goods unless the older lands in turn buy theirs.

That is the inner problem that faces the advanced nations today. They must help the new states to gain at least a reasonable share of the globe's plenty — for without that share there must ultimately be only enmity and strife. And to do so they must give up, not only surplus funds which may be regained in some form, but also a share of their domestic markets. They must buy the new countries' goods even if it means a readjustment of their own economies.

At this time 122 nations are meeting in Geneva to discuss world trade. The newly emerging states are making the point that not only must they be able to produce on a twentieth-century basis, but they must also be able to sell their products to each other and to the great industrialized powers.

The crucial question is: will the industrialized powers recognize this need in practice as well as in theory? Will they make it possible for the emerging countries to emerge? If they do not, then they will have plugged the steam vent, and it will not be a question of fact but only of time as to when the explosion occurs.

Voice of Youth?

BE IT IN A DOMESTIC HOUSEhold or a political party, unruly children can cause embarrassment.

Such appears to be the reaction of Britain's Labor Party following the Easter conference of Young Socialists at Brighton.

With the general election drawing closer, the Labor Party recognizes the disadvantages of a fractious household and the effect it could have on voters. But this seems of little concern to the Young Socialists.

While the Conservatives are seeking to make capital of Labor's willingness to share Britain's bomb with outsiders — and extend the reasoning to suggest Labor would give away the Royal Navy too — the young people are acting up.

The conference heard demands that Britain quit NATO. The conference listened to spokesmen speaking in glowing terms of democratic life in East Germany and calling for that country's recognition by Britain. And delegates were told that while Britain should abandon the bomb, the Soviet Union should keep it because the Russian device is "the workers' bomb."

True, there was rebuttal to these suggestions. One 20-year-old delegate pointed out that the conference was stalling the Labor Party in the back. Another, conceding that people opposed to the bomb had a point, asked what "God-given qualities" the Russian bomb had that the Western bomb lacked.

The Brighton show has left mature Labor Party people sad but not yet prepared to disband the Young Socialists.

The party image has undoubtedly been somewhat tarnished, but if the coming generation at Brighton upset the party elders, they may look on non-political ructions which have also raised a few doubts about young people — the hoodlumism of gangs that wrecked the watering place of Clacton during the Easter weekend.

Which leaves both the Labor Party and the British public with a truth and a question: Youth will be heard; but how stridently?

'Act Now for Future'

TWO WEEKS AGO THE PROVINCIAL legislature prorogued after a session notable for the storm of public protest which greeted Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan's proposals to open British Columbia's parks to expanded commercial exploitation.

Significantly, during the current National Wildlife Week, the Canadian Wildlife Federation has chosen for its theme: "Canadians need outdoor recreation; act now to provide for the future."

The national organization, which uses this time of the year to honor the memory of the late Jack Miner by marking his April 10 birthday, enunciates a general principle given particular connotations in this province. The federation calls for action to safeguard the wilderness and its creatures from the crowding march of industry and modern, tense living.

The call could not reach British Columbia ears under more appropriate circumstances than the recent defence of our parks by so large a section of our conservation-minded community.

'Better the Guilty Go Free?'

CONFORMING TO THE CONVENTION that it is better for the guilty to go free than have the innocent convicted, most Canadians would hesitate to vary procedures which give benefits to an accused person and provide strong protection for a suspect.

At the same time it is conceivable that thinking on this subject here may not differ too greatly from the point of view expressed by New Zealand Supreme Court Judge Trevor Henry to the Federation of New Zealand Justices Association the other day.

Criminal trials, in his opinion, "should not be a sporting event in which the guilty persons have a better-than-even chance of acquittal."

To make them something more equitable, the New Zealand judge believes there should be a reconsideration of principles and practices to prevent a system, devised historically and occasionally haphazardly to protect the innocent, from becoming an "impervious line of defence for the hardened and experienced criminal today."

In the light of recent Ontario events, different aspects of legal procedure in his country criticized by the judge invite attention.

He has raised a question about the rules restricting the rights of police to question accused persons; the right of accused persons to refuse questioning at any time during their trial; the prohibition of comment on their refusal to testify; the right of accused persons to make an unsworn statement from the dock, and various rules and practices which, if ignored, could result in quashing a verdict through appeal on a "technicality."

The field covered by the New Zealand jurist is one for study in other countries where criminal rates are rising and where wrongdoers are escaping conviction — and later treatment — through provisions made to protect the law-abiding citizen.

It is a debate that should draw wide attention and can be expected to continue for some time.

FROM OTTAWA

By MAURICE WESTERN

Just Constitutional Claptrap

THERE is nothing like a federal-provincial conference for the cultivation of new doctrines calculated to lead us ever deeper into the constitutional brambles. The theory enunciated by Mr. Roberts in Quebec City is the latest in a stately procession of such fictions.

Western

In the palmy days of Mr. Mitchell Hepburn and Mr. Maurice Duplessis we had, for example, the famous "compact theory" of Confederation, according to which the British North America Act was a sacred treaty among sovereign provinces. While this was historical nonsense, it aroused great enthusiasm in central Canada. The theory has never actually been interred but it is generally ignored in these latter days for practical reasons. Quebec, on reconsideration, has come to the conclusion that it does not think much of the original compact, sacred though it may have been.

'Contracting Out'

The most cherished right of our time (which would probably have started the "sovereign" provinces) is that of "contracting out." Mr. Pearson, with some prodding from Mr. Roberts, has agreed that the right is general and applicable to Ontario no less than to Quebec. It is already being exercised by Quebec in regard to the Canada Pension Plan and the Ontario premier, although not yet formally out of that scheme, is talking wistfully of following Mr. Lesage on the freedom road.

Mr. Roberts, however, has not stopped with this provisional declaration of independence. He has been giving some thought to the situation in the federal Parliament and it is this which has caused him to enunciate the latest constitutional theory.

Are provinces which enter the plan, he asks, to be subject to decisions taken by members from provinces which have contracted out? "It seems possible to have one or more provinces which do not participate in the plan having the power to further regulate and alter the plan through their elected representatives in the House of Commons, even though such regulations and alterations will not affect the non-participating provinces."

"Such results," he declared, "would strike at the core and roots of Confederation, and indicate the difficulties that face us in devising acceptable means of achieving the flexibility we need in our national and provincial affairs."

The problem is not imaginary. If Ontario joins Quebec in the outer darkness beyond the federal plan, more than half the MPs — 160 of 265 — will represent non-participating provinces. Will federal pensions have to be dealt with by a rump Parliament of 105 members in order to preserve the "core and roots" of Confederation?

It is a disturbing thought. But if the theory implied in Mr. Roberts' words has any validity, it is late in the day to worry about the core and roots. They must already be a mangled mess.

The fact is that Parliament has been doing this sort of thing for almost 100 years. Members elected to the House have always felt free to comment or vote on affairs relating to any province. It could scarcely be otherwise because it is difficult to isolate a policy applying to one province and to assert that it has no implications for others. There will undoubtedly be a relation between a federal pension plan applicable to eight provinces and whatever arrangements are deemed necessary in the other two.

No Exclusive Action

A few, widely scattered illustrations will demonstrate the point. In 1912 the boundaries of Quebec were extended northwards to take in an area which had formed part of the Territories. It might appear, since no other boundaries were then affected, that this was a matter for Quebecers alone. Among those who interested themselves in the measure were two famous Maritimers, Sir Robert Borden and Mr. Pugsley.

In the 1920s the return to the western provinces of their natural resources was a much discussed issue. It came up in 1929 on a resolution introduced by an Ontario member. At least six Maritime members spoke to it; so did Mr. Church of Toronto and Mr. Cahan of Montreal. The opinions of Mr.

Bourassa, the celebrated Quebec nationalist member, were quoted at length.

Finally, consider the case of the Pine Point Railway in 1961. This involved a quarrel between two Alberta groups over the best route to Great Slave Lake. The government, getting little help from a royal commission, decided, probably wisely, that the road should start from Grimsby. The debate was not left to Albertans; in view of the general interest of taxpayers, it was suggested that they alone should be heard. Among those who participated were Mr. Balcer and Mr. Chevrier from Quebec, Mr. Pickers-gill from Newfoundland, Mr. Winch from British Columbia, Mr. Matheson from Ontario and Mr. Fleming from New Brunswick.

Unworkable

Mr. Roberts' curious notion that MPs should contract out with their provinces has this defect: it would make our system of government unworkable. The Pearson government, over the past year, has demonstrated that it has an effective majority (though not a party majority) in the whole House. But this is built largely on the very provinces which may be non-participants. In the other eight the government, even with the solid backing of the smaller groups, could muster only 44 of 105 members.

This is not unusual; it is normal. Even the biggest sweeps fall short in some provinces. Mr. St. Laurent in 1949, at the Liberal zenith, failed to carry Alberta. Mr. Diefenbaker, in rolling up his unprecedented 1958 majority, elected only two of seven members in Newfoundland. The idea of concurrent majorities died with the old pre-Confederation province of Canada and has never been resurrected because it would reduce a federal government to impotence. Any government has to take its majority where it can find it and rely upon its general support in the House to implement policies affecting any part of the country.

It may be impractical to implement an eight-province pension plan but not for the "core and roots" theory of Mr. Roberts which is constitutional claptrap.

THE WHITE PAPER ON DEFENCE

At Last: a Reasonably Clear Statement

WITH the exception of one serious defect or weakness in the command structure, the new defence plans as outlined in the government white paper are courageous, realistic and forward-looking. Defence Minister Hellyer and the various committees and staff groups who drew up this "blueprint," or "guide lines," as they are termed, deserve great credit for the bold and broad approach they have taken to the complex problem of Canada's defence forces.

As the white paper points out, the outline is not rigid. Changes may be required; many factors must still be resolved. It will be hoped that, with further consideration, a change will be made in the one basic defect mentioned above, that is in the role, authority and single responsibility forecast for the all-powerful or supreme "defence chief."

Perhaps more important even than the logical yet revolutionary step of unifying the three armed services — the first time this has been seriously tackled by any modern power — is the fact that Canada now for the first time since World War II has a reasonably clear statement as to our defence objectives. In short, we now know specifically what we are trying to achieve and also the methods by which we intend to pursue these objectives. The white paper sets forth also the priority to be given the various methods and projects.

Collective Measures

Stated briefly, Canada will participate in collective measures in co-operating with United Nations to maintain the peace not only through police actions and patrols but also through controlled disarmament. Secondly, Canada will support, through collective defence, the obligations embodied in NATO. We are in addition fully committed with the United States to the defence of North America and, finally, we must be organized for the protection of Canada, including the responsibility of internal security.

For the foregoing clarification, if for nothing else, the white paper should be welcomed not only by the services themselves but also by Parliament and the public.

It is not inconceivable that these programs, objectives and priorities may be drastically altered in the next decade due to new weapon-systems in the nuclear field, perhaps due to changes in the NATO structure; or, again, should new factors arise concerning China, or should Canada join the OAS, we may have other urgent responsibilities in our own hemisphere. This the white paper recognizes, but for the present at least we have some definite goals to pursue.

The concept of unifying naval, army and air services is certainly not new. Before the end of World War II, many field commanders had arrived at this conclusion and had started to advocate this change. Through their experience in assault landings, close air support, commando raids and other forms of "combined ops," these commanders had recognized that commanders and staff officers of the future would have to be highly conversant with the operations of the other two services. This need was clearly demonstrated through the many special training courses, such as air liaison schools, army-air co-op wings, assault landing courses, joint staff schools, joint planning staffs and so forth, which came into being during World War II.

Commanders had also grasped the inefficiencies and wastefulness of overlapping field services and supply systems such as medical, signals, and transport, to mention only a few, as well as such often common supplies as rations, petrol and ammunition. With the development of new field tactics for a nuclear war — whereby independent mixed combat teams and battle groups may have to operate from alternative and widely dispersed supply depots, serviced either by air or sea — came strong confirmation on this need for unification.

The case for unification at defence headquarters levels is even more conclusive, as indicated in the white paper. Quite apart from the tremendous savings possible in staff personnel at large headquarters, there are great advantages to be had in the reduction of red tape, confusion, controversy and delayed decisions. Inter-service rivalry for priorities in equipment, manpower and so forth can be greatly reduced. Scores of separate and inter-service committees can be scrapped. No longer will each service be able to demand separate establishments for the testing of weapons, vehicles and clothing. Matters of accommodation, stores depots, recruiting, as well as much of the basic training, can now be centralized and co-ordinated.

Hand to the Plow

Why has this obvious step not been tackled long ago? One of the chief reasons is undoubtedly fear of the resistance it was likely to encounter through individual pride of service and inter-service rivalry, quite apart from the anticipation of the rigid views of diehard admirals, generals and air marshals. Undoubtedly Mr. Hellyer can expect some resistance to his plans on this score but in the writer's view, this form of obstruction will prove to be far less than many people anticipate. The encouraging fact that Mr. Hellyer and his service chiefs have now set their hands to the plow along this rocky and unbroken furrow marks a defence milestone for Canada. It is to be hoped that they will persist in their efforts long enough to reap the full benefits of their pioneering.

What Message?

The Open Grave was an excellent television production and certainly not sacrilegious, but what was its real message?

The theme of the play I am sure gave much satisfaction to Mr. Khrushchev. It honors and glorifies anti-government activities, ban the bomb and other such movements. It encourages sabotage, and depicts the employer (capitalist) as a nasty fellow who arranges the murder of an undercover agent so that in turn an idealist may be accused of the murder and put to death.

It is interesting to speculate what would happen to a Russian broadcasting company which might present such a play in the U.S.S.R.

Canadian Example

From The Christian Science Monitor

TO Canada must go the credit for last-minute action last month making it possible for a UN force to step in when the position of the British troops on Cyprus — through no fault of their own — was becoming untenable. Now Canadian troops have been ferried at Canadian expense to the island to form a meaningful nucleus around which a UN force can be built up.

By a significant but not contrived coincidence, the Canadians on Cyprus began their first peace-keeping patrols under the UN flag just as their government in Ottawa published a revolutionary White Paper on their country's defence. The White Paper rightly notes that Canada has taken part in virtually every UN operation calling for military personnel.

The proposed reorganization of the Canadian Armed Forces puts great stress on the country's continuing to have units even better prepared to join the UN peace-keeping efforts whenever and wherever these are called for. Clearly a country such as Canada is politically eligible to join in such operations where the super powers or greater powers are not. That the Canadian Government accepts such a responsibility is indeed praiseworthy — and of course it points the way for others.

...REPORTING

OTTAWA—The trouble with co-operative federalism, Pearson style, is that the co-operative attitude is mainly on one side. At the Quebec conference last week the provinces again proved they are mainly interested in money and power.

Premiers Lesage and Robarts went to ridiculous lengths to establish bargaining positions: Lesage with his claim that Ottawa owes Quebec the money that Quebec would have received if the late Premier Duplessis had not opted Quebec out of various shared-cost programs, and Robarts with his suggestion that federal MPs from provinces opting out of federal programs should virtually withdraw from the Commons when the House discusses programs affecting opting-in provinces.

And despite Lesage, payment of family allowances on behalf of students 16 and 17 is not federal encroachment in education. Parliament can spend money any way it wants—this was established when the "baby bonus" was first introduced. In the extension of the baby bonus proposed in the budget March 16, school attendance is only a qualifying condition, like a means test. Similarly with federal loans to students.

But it was a foregone conclusion that Lesage would beat the drums over this new federal "incursion" into the provincial field of education. Which raises the question: Why did Finance Minister Gordon insist on presenting his budget before the conference, unless it was to road Lesage?

If it is Prime Minister Pearson's strategy to isolate Lesage by encouraging him to take increasingly rash and irrational positions, and then destroy him by winning a new and powerful mandate from the people, Mr. Pearson has more political daring and cunning than most people suspect.

But whatever the PM's strategy, on the evidence before the country Mr. Pearson is buying time at the expense of the Canada Pension Plan and federal authority generally.

Indications are that Mr. Pearson will settle for a federal pension plan in opting-in provinces, and provincial plans in opting-out provinces that will be portable and will pay roughly the same benefits.

"Portability" means only that the pension will be paid even if the pensioner is no longer resident in the paying province. "Roughly the same benefits" probably means whatever Lesage wants to pay.

Noticeably missing is any insistence on roughly the same premiums. Quebec is expected to make its premium 4 per cent of payroll, compared with 2 per cent for the Canada plan. And as Welfare Minister LaMarsh told me when the revised Canada plan was announced in February, that 2 per cent is still twice as much as need be charged to finance the plan under present economic circumstances. That's why a $2.5 billion surplus will be built up in 10 years. On a pay-as-we-go basis the Canada plan premium should be only 1 per cent.

Part of Pearson's dilemma must be knowledge that appeasement only whets Lesage's appetite, and the longer Ottawa continues to appease the more nearly impossible it will be to stop. And somewhere stop he must, or English-Canadian votes will turn him out of office and—a shuddering thought—put John Diefenbaker back into power.

Otters Can Live With Humans

Dear Sir:

Would you please give some details of the river otter in the Victoria area. Were there ever sea otters here? And what is the difference? —G.M.B.

Dear G.M.B.:

The river otter, so called to distinguish it from the sea otter, is a relatively common animal along the entire coast of the province as well as along the major river systems. While it is essentially a land mammal it is beautifully adapted for swimming and diving and in fact obtains most of its food from the water.

In some areas various species of fish are the main food and these are captured by direct pursuit. Along the seashore, crabs and mussels form the staple diet but mammals and birds may also be eaten.

Otters seem to tolerate the proximity of humans more readily than do other wild animals. Several otter families live within the city limits of Victoria and have done so for many years. Residents of the Portage Inlet area have reported otters on several occasions and a small colony has existed for an unknown period within the Inner Harbor.

Some years ago Mr. Max Lohbrunner who lives aboard the "Mel" at the foot of Herald Street befriended a family of otters that lived under a nearby wharf. By putting food out regularly he gained their confidence and soon had the animals coming on the after-deck each night to be fed. Eventually, one otter bolder than the others, entered the cabin, panicked, and "wrecked the joint" before finding the proper exit. Following this incident the feeding table was moved from the boat to the wharf.

Otters have displayed remarkable homing powers. Some years ago two animals were trapped in Victoria's Inner Harbor and sent to the zoo in Stanley Park, Vancouver. They escaped and three weeks later turned up in their old haunts!

Carl

The sea otter is a somewhat similar animal but differs in several ways. In the first place it is larger, being about five feet in length (compared with four feet for the river otter), and the tail is very much shorter in proportion. The head is flat and broad, with rather prominent whiskers but very small external ears. The legs are short. The hind feet are flipper-like and fully webbed with fur on both upper and lower surfaces.

Finally, sea otters habitually swim on their backs, floating high in the water, and only rarely do they haul out on rock reefs. When they do come out on land they move rather awkwardly because their limbs are designed for swimming, not walking.

Favorite food of the sea otter is sea urchins. When these are scarce abalones and other molluscs are eaten. The sea otter uses its chest for a table and is said to use a stone as an anvil on which to break shells.

During their period of abundance sea otters probably occurred along the entire Pacific coast from southern California north to the Bering Sea area and west to the coast of Kamchatka and the Commander and Kurile Islands.

Locally they were probably most abundant along the sections of the British Columbia coast that are exposed to the open ocean. It is not likely they were very common in the immediate vicinity of Victoria but they must have been known to the Indians of this area because sea otters are represented on some of the old wood carvings still in existence.

Sea otters were hunted so intensively for their valuable fur that they are no longer regularly found along the British Columbia coastline, but occasionally sight records indicate that a few individuals may exist in certain areas. However, a growing population of sea otters flourishes in the Aleutians and a few hundred still persist along the coast of southern California. Wanderers from those centres may in time re-establish the species in their former range.

Mossy Lawns Need Diagnosis

When moss invades a lawn it shows that the grass is not a healthy, vigorous state due to one or more reasons.

The first step in controlling moss is to determine the reason for its presence and then to eliminate the cause. Once the fault is corrected the moss will disappear.

The most common cause of moss in lawns is lack of fertility in the soil, and quite often all that is needed is a sound fertilizer program to invigorate the grass and enable it to overcome the invasion.

Jack

In addition to low fertility there may be poor drainage, acid soil conditions (created by too much fertilizer, heavy shade over the lawn area or the wrong type of grass, drought during hot weather due to slope or rapid drainage, and compacted soil because sufficient sand and humus were not incorporated before the area was seeded.

The application of moss killers and the raking out of moss by hand is not sufficient in itself. The cause must be eradicated, the mossy areas loosened and reseeded and a fertilizer program instituted.

Where unsightly burning can be tolerated for a while the moss can be treated with ammonium sulphate at the rate of one pound to 100 square feet, without watering afterwards. Both the grass and moss will become burned in appearance, but the grass will recover in three to four weeks and be improved by the fertilizer.

Reseeding the bare patches and an application of complete fertilizer should follow.

Various moss killers can be purchased, and the applications should conform to directions on the container.

Remember that a moss killer is just that and nothing more. Once the moss is killed, the gardener has to attend to the replacing of the grass and maintaining a healthy turf which can resist moss invasion.

Egypt Cleanses Air Waves, Press

CAIRO (AP)—Compared with its free-swinging past, the propaganda machine of President Nasser of Egypt now is a relative tabby cat.

A changing world and the recent Arab summit conference, which resulted in mutual pledges to cleanse the Arab air-waves, have cut down Nasser's target.

Once Cairo's newspaper readers could open their papers each morning certain to see high crimes and moral turpitude ascribed to a generous portion of the world's leaders. The voice of the Arabs and the newspapers were free to lambaste almost anything in sight and be sure of tacit approval from "the boss."

The approved list of targets nowadays seems more or less limited to Israel, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and what is called British imperialism.

There are occasional exceptions. President Johnson was raked over the Arab coals for promising U.S. aid to Israel in a nuclear project to remove salt from water. But the days when the United States was fair game are evidently over, at least for the present.

Similarly, the Russians have been largely off-limits since they signed up to finance the Aswan Dam.

AFRICA SNIPING STOPS

The Addis Ababa conference of African leaders, with its pledges of non-interference in others' affairs, similarly cut the African list. Before then there had been thinly veiled charges that the former French states were still lackeys of President de Gaulle.

Even Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia got an occasional arrow—but no more.

France got off the hook after peace came to Algeria and Nasser set out to woo de Gaulle from his pro-Israel stance.

Through all this, the Cairo press and radio maintained its cutting edge by attacking Arab leaders opposed to Nasser. King Hussein of Jordan was called a British puppet in one of the more polite attacks.

The sex life of aging King Saud of Saudi Arabia and his concubines was a staple. Syria's secessionist leaders were called Fascists and butchers.

King Saud now is hardly mentioned and King Hussein has been rehabilitated. A popular weekly magazine had a four-page spread of photos showing the king, his British-born wife and infant Prince Abdullah in poses designed to melt a mother's heart.

But the Cairo propaganda machine still has some of its old bite. It can sniff an "imperialist plot" quicker than anybody outside the Communist world.

That has been the line on Cyprus. All British initiatives in the dispute were condemned.

Vitamin Pills for Youngsters Claimed Useless, Even Harmful

MONTREAL (CP)—North Americans waste more money on vitamin pills than on almost anything else, a United States pediatrician said Monday.

Dr. Samuel J. Fomon, professor of pediatrics at Iowa State University, was speaking at the opening of a four-day assembly of the College of General Practice of Canada.

"The American public probably spends more money needlessly on vitamin supplements than on almost any other commodity," he said.

It was unlikely that any healthy infant or child receiving an adequate diet would benefit from supplementary administration of vitamins A or B, and vitamin D was needed only by infants on breast milk or other unfortified with vitamin D.

"Children beyond infancy will rarely need dietary supplementation with vitamin D because exposure to sunlight will ordi-ary fill the need for this vitamin," Dr. Fomon said.

"Regular administration of B vitamins to healthy infants and children is unnecessary and wasteful."

He also reminded doctors that "relatively serious consequences arising from overdosage with vitamins have been reported in recent years."

However, it was desirable to provide children with a dietary supplement of fluoride from birth to about 14 years of age in cases where the water supply was not fluoridated.

"Fluoride in drops, tablets or in the water supply had been demonstrated to provide significant protection against tooth decay."

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoid case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months. This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Stock Options Fair Reward for Executives

By GORDON BELL
Times Business Editor
Stock option plans for executives often come under fire from company shareholders. There seems to be a feeling that the executives are gaining an advantage from these plans which is denied to the real owners of the business.

However, Toronto lawyer Harold Sutherland points out in an article in the April issue of The Canadian Chartered Accountant that in the standard option plan it is the shareholders who have the most to gain. Generally speaking, Mr. Sutherland says, the modern company owes its success to its executives and they must be suitably rewarded for their efforts.

The effects of taxation are such as to greatly limit the effectiveness of salary increases as a reward and increases, in any event do not provide the feeling of participation in the success of a company which it is essential that executives should feel.

In many cases, in fact, a company could hardly afford to pay the increase which would be necessary in order to actually give the executive enough after-tax income to make it worthwhile. Hence the stock option plan whereby in order for the executive to gain he must make the company operation sufficiently successful to provide a rise in the value of the stock to make it profitable for him to exercise his option.

The shareholder thus gains by having his stock increase in value without draining funds from the company for salary increases which could be put to better use in expanding operations or paying higher dividends.

Assets of selected trust and mortgage loan companies rose sharply in the third quarter of last year.

Statistics gathered in Ottawa show a 19 per cent increase in total assets in the period compared with the final quarter of 1962. Deposits with trust companies rose by nearly 19.5 per cent and were mainly invested in mortgages which rose by nearly 29 per cent.

Mortgage loan companies showed an increase of almost 14 per cent in deposits with total assets rising by 16.5 per cent. Most of these funds also went into mortgages which increased by almost 18 per cent.

Westminster Paper Co. Ltd. shareholders will be asked to approve a change of name to Scott Paper Ltd. at the annual meeting.

The Canadian company, 54.6 per cent owned by Scott Paper of Philadelphia, said the change would simplify sales and advertising since its products are now sold under the Scott name.

Westminster had net earnings in 1963 of $1,422,858 or $1.80 a share compared with $1,302,532 or $1.63 a share the previous year.

UN TRADE PARLEY

Delegates Walk Out On Portugal

GENEVA (Reuters) — Delegates from 80 African, Asian, Latin American and Communist-bloc countries got up and walked out of the United Nations world trade and development conference here today rather than listen to a speech by the chief delegate from Portugal.

The chairman of the 121-nation conference, Abdel Moneim el Kaissouny of Egypt, left the chair before Portugal's secretary of state for trade, Armando de Paula Coelho, took the rostrum.

None of the Latin American vice chairmen would agree to replace him to call the Portuguese speaker to the rostrum.

The call finally came from Canadian delegate L. Dana Wilgress.

As soon as Wilgress called on de Paula Coelho, the walkout began. Delegates rose and headed slowly for the exits. There were no incidents.

De Paula Coelho's audience dwindled to some 30 delegations even as he began his speech, in French.

The African states represented at the conference earlier had decided to boycott Portuguese and South African speakers. However, it was learned they decided not to continue efforts to have South Africa expelled from the conference.

U.S. Switches Latin Policy

By DAN KURZMAN
WASHINGTON—The United States, which has so often reiterated its support of Latin democracy, has apparently decided that circumstances in Brazil warranted the forceful overthrow of President Joao Goulart.
Only a few hours after Ranieri Mazzilli, president of the Brazilian chamber of deputies, was installed as Goulart's successor, President Johnson congratulated the Brazilian people for resolving their difficulties "within the framework of constitutional democracy."
Secretary of State Dean Rusk, in effect, said the same thing.
In determining that the change in government was constitutional, the U.S. is standing on technical grounds. But the fact remains that Goulart did not voluntarily resign. He was ousted by force.
Only two years ago, when the alliance for progress was just being conceived, this country reacted quite differently when a very similar situation arose in Argentina. Argentina President Arturo Frondizi was, like Goulart, deposed by the military and replaced by a constitutional successor.

The U.S. strongly expressed its disapproval and suspended diplomatic relations and economic aid for several weeks despite the new government's technical constitutionality.
In both cases the U.S. professed to base its policy on moral grounds, that is, on the question of constitutionality. But in each case, the U.S. interpreted morality differently.
The Kennedy administration publicly deplored the Argentine coup even though Frondizi's tolerance toward the Cuban regime and other "shortcomings" caused considerable concern here. For the issue was not whether we liked the man, but whether he was dealt with through democratic processes.
The Johnson administration, on the other hand, had expressed admiration for the new Brazilian government even before its character is clear—publicly basing this attitude on the fact that the regime is technically constitutional.
NEW APPROACH
This action sharply reflects Washington's move from an idealistic to a pragmatic approach over the last two years, a movement accentuated since Thomas C. Mann was selected by President Johnson as his director of Latin-American affairs.

And on strictly pragmatic grounds, the U.S. may have a strong case for its action. Goulart, it appears, was an opportunist who permitted his country to drift into economic and political chaos, often in league with the Communists.
Some U.S. officials even say that he planned, with Communist support, to set himself up as a dictator of the Peronist stripe. So it may be, paradoxically enough, that the ouster of a constitutional president might have been necessary to preserve democracy.
But while Washington's quick unconditional acceptance of the new regime may be founded on pragmatism, it has tried to give the impression that this approval is really based on the regime's constitutionality—in other words, on moral grounds.
MEANT WHAT IT SAID
The Kennedy administration's effort to base its decision on such grounds had the virtue of emphasizing to Latin America that the U.S. meant what it said about its desire to promote democracy.

The similar effort by the Johnson administration could have a contrary effect, for few Latin Americans are likely to believe that the new Brazilian regime came to power by genuinely constitutional means, whatever their attitude may be toward this regime.
If pragmatism is used as a method to edge the Latin American nations toward stronger democracy, even at the expense occasionally of theoretical constitutionality, the Latin democrats probably wouldn't be upset.

Democracy Didn't Shine During LBJ's 'Good Week'

By CARMAN CUMMING
(CP Staff Writer)
Last Saturday Lyndon B. Johnson called in the Washington press corps and observed that "this has been a good week for this hemisphere."

This is the kind of week it was:
1. On Monday an anti-Castro committee in the U.S. reported that the Cuban government is using a new device described as "death on wheels" to transport court, jury and executioners about the country to deal with the rebels.
2. On Tuesday the tanks came out in the streets again in Brazil as a military uprising broke out.

3. On Wednesday Haiti's incredible dictator, Francois Duvalier, told his squalor-ridden people that they would have the good fortune of his services as president for life.

4. On Thursday a leading candidate for the Chilean presidency, Salvador Allende, promised that if elected in September he will nationalize $1,000,000,000 worth of U.S. copper properties.
5. On Friday tiny Panama knuckled under and agreed to resume relations with the United States without fulfillment of its condition that the U.S. undertake to re-negotiate the treaty under which the Americans control the Panama Canal zone indefinitely.

By this time Brazil's President Joao Goulart had fled across the Uruguayan border in the face of army columns advancing on Rio de Janeiro and the Congress, had named an acting president.

Johnson said the U.S. government was "glad that the transition in Brazil has been constitutional."
This prompted some cynics to wonder whether Johnson would feel the same way if the U.S. 7th Fleet attacked San Francisco and the 6th Fleet attacked New York and he was forced to flee to Saskatchewan.

It may have been a good week for the hemisphere but it wasn't much of a week for democracy.

Belgian Strike Protests Mount

(Times News Service).
BRUSSELS—A warrant for the arrest of two doctors in north Belgium was issued today following the death of a 15-month-old baby during the doctor's strike which is a week old with no solution in sight.
Thousands of workers marched through the streets today in protest against the walk-out and the Belgian Communist party called for a 24-hour general strike with "massive demonstrations" in principal towns.
The two doctors, who were provisionally detained Monday, were charged with "non-assistance to a person in danger of death."
A court will decide Thursday whether the warrant should be maintained or dropped.
The two were in charge of an emergency clinic where the boy was taken.
Dr. Andre Wynen, one of the leaders of the strike which was joined by nearly all of the country's 12,000 doctors, told a press conference Monday that there was a six-hour delay in treatment for the little boy, Eric Moons, the youngest of five children.
But the delay was due to the fact the family doctor who was called to see him was sick himself, Wynen said.
The sick doctor referred the child to the emergency service clinic set up by the strikers to deal with severe illnesses, Wynen added.
"But the child's case was previously classified as 'non-urgent' and this caused the delay," he said.
Nevertheless, the child was taken to hospital and received the treatment he needed, he said. His death was due to "the normal course of the illness," he explained.
Wynen's account of the incident differed from earlier reports which said the child's father had originally called his own family doctor to treat the boy for an attack of bronchitis. But since the doctor was out on strike he called the emergency service at Herentals, about 10 miles from the family's home.
The two doctors in charge of the emergency service arrived and took the baby to the clinic where he died Sunday morning.

Experiment Removes Isotope From Blood

MOSCOW (AP) — Ordinarily fatal doses of the radioactive isotope Strontium-90, have been removed from the blood of experimental dogs by a Soviet researcher.
Reporting the experiments of Mikhail Petrov at the Institute of Biophysics, the Soviet news agency Tass says an artificial kidney and quick action were necessary to prevent the dogs' deaths.
Strontium-90 is a long-lasting isotope created by nuclear weapons' explosions. In mild doses that are not fatal it can be transmitted from the milk of cows that eat exposed grass and in other ways.
Petrov injected lethal doses into the blood of three dogs, Tass said.
Five minutes later he began removing Strontium-90 from one dog by passing its blood through an artificial kidney built around cellophane plaques. One-third of the isotope was eliminated in 4½ hours, enabling the dog to survive.
Similar treatment of a second dog began a little later and continued for six hours, reducing Petrov was quoted as saying the artificial kidney must be used quickly, before strontium injected into the blood has had time to scatter among cells of the entire organism.

Red Cosmosnauts Training For New Travels in Space

MOSCOW (AP)—Yuri Gagarin said today he and other Soviet cosmonauts are training for new voyages into space.
At the same time the news agency Tass announced Soviet scientists have made important experiments with a new type of air for space ships to permit cosmonauts to endure the stresses of flights beyond the earth's atmosphere.
The twin announcements indicated the Russians are preparing for some new space spectacular, possibly soon.
Gagarin declined to say when the next space flight might occur or who would be going.
"When we will go, and who will go—that we do not know," said Gagarin with a grin. "We will wait and see."

Also present at the press conference where all Soviet cosmonauts who have journeyed into space—except Mrs. Valentina Nikolayevna Tereshkova, the first woman cosmonaut. She is expecting a baby.
PLAN ANNIVERSARY
The press conference was called in connection with the "day of the cosmonauts"—April 12—the third anniversary of the historic flight of Gagarin, the first man to orbit the earth.
Soviet space scientists also were on hand but they were mum.
Tass released the news about the experiments with synthetic air in pressurized cabins.
Tass said that nitrogen was taken out of the air and replaced by helium. Normally, nitrogen constitutes 78 per cent of the air a person breathes.
Soviet scientists used a helium-oxygen mixture because this will enable future space men "better (to) endure pressure fluctuations and higher temperatures in a space ship cabin."

The new mixture has been tested, Tass said, on men who remained in pressure cabins for periods for 10 to 25 days.
The mixture was not a complete success. Tass reported the helium produced a surprising result, namely, that "a man with a bass voice began to speak tenor."
"This is not a hazard to health, but it does create additional difficulties," Tass said. "This is why the studies will continue until the optimal variation of an artificial helium atmosphere is found."

Stanley Cup: Travesty of Hockey or Milquetoast?

By ED SIMON
Canadian Press

Penalty records are broken with every wag of the referee's finger. Complaints about the officiating mount from participants and non-participants alike.

Is unnecessary violence turning the Stanley Cup playoffs into a travesty of hockey as it should be played?

"Brute strength, clenched fists, high-sticks and bone-shattering boarding are replacing the adroit puck-handling, the fast, exciting winger and the bruising, but clean defence-man," complains a sports-page editorial in the Vancouver Sun.

"Hockey is simply becoming too rough and it is time something was done about it," says

Health Minister Judy LaMarsh. "The professionals encourage violence because they feel that is what the public wants."

"In my personal experience I've noted a great reduction in violence in the last 10 years," says president Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League. "The game being played today is just a Milquetoast version of what I've seen in the time I've been identified with the game."

Statistically, the current cup semi-final between Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs is well on its way to wiping all existing penalty records off the books.

In five games, both have outstripped the record 128 minutes assessed against Detroit Red Wings in a six-game semi-final last season, Canadiens compiling 146 minutes and Leafs 132. Their combined 103 penalties and 278 minutes also established new marks as did their combined 16 penalties in a period and 31 in a game.

But another look at that 31-penalty total, compiled in the series opener in Montreal, shows these figures are not necessarily a yardstick for violence. Seventeen of the offences punished by referee Frank Udvari were listed as hooking, holding, tripping, interference, illegal faceoff procedure and having too many men on the ice.

In fact, the two majors and one misconduct penalty imposed during the game were exceeded by the six majors and two misconducts in the fourth game last Thursday, in which the over-all penalty total was lower and the total time served of 102 minutes equalled a mark set in a Toronto-Detroit game 12 years ago.

Pat Curran of the Montreal Gazette blames the officials for inconsistency in the current Toronto-Montreal series. He says infractions are penalized in one game and not in another and referees even up penalties between both teams regardless of the trend of the game.

Statistics bear out the charge to some extent. Toronto has served 52 penalties to Montreal's 51 over the five games although Canadiens, assessed three misconduct penalties to Leafs' two, have put in 14 more minutes in the box.

But in the current Chicago-Detroit series, handled by the same officials, the discrepancies have been wider. Forty-six penalties have been handed out to the Red Wings to 38 for the Black Hawks with Detroit having an edge of 103 minutes to 87 in time served.

Annis Stukus of the Toronto Telegram blames fans who cheer the crude play of the Maple Leafs' Eddie Shack and boo his more talented teammate, Frank Mahovlich.

"I was disappointed Thursday night," Stukus writes, "when they didn't boo Shack off the ice for butting Henri Richard, a man he outweighed by a good 25 pounds, during a scrap in which the smaller man did a good job of handling himself as long as only fists were used."

Jim Proudfoot of The Star blames the coaches:

"A referee makes hundreds of split-second decisions during a hockey game. Coaches are only asked to make sure they have the correct number of men on the ice, a simple assignment they often flub.

"Yet when you approach the losing club's dressing room you know what you're about to hear: Poignant moans about bad officiating."

Frank Boucher, a seven-time winner of the Lady Byng Trophy for his clean play with New York Rangers a quarter-century ago, says the Saskatchewan Junior League, of which he is commissioner, has a problem teaching its players the value of sportsmanship because they see it disregarded at the highest level.

"The situation is drastic and drastic measures must be taken."

The Sun editorial asks if the time has come for someone to clean up hockey.

"This is the era of the hired assassin, a man apparently paid not for his ability to put the puck in the net, but rather his opponents in hospital. . . . When the men who run hockey hail back-alley brawling as a sure-fire box-office attraction and selling point for future games, the sport is in danger. . . ."

Campbell, an NHL referee and official since 1929, says he doesn't approve of fighting on the ice.

"But I also know hockey is an explosive game and when players resort to fisticuffs I treat it as a safety valve."

"As far as I'm concerned, hockey is a game of violent bodily contact and should stay that way."

Hal Malone LOOKS AT SPORTS

This is the day y'r operator intended to sit down and tell how easy it was to get rich while bowling.

He has already told you how to make money while watching the Stanley Cup semifinals. Toronto and Detroit, he said, should make a wholesome two-some. One more whack across the teeth for both of them and the price for advice around here is going to take a severe drop.

But about the bowling. The intended vehicle to yachts, platinum blondes and Irish whisky was a tempin bonspiel running two weekends.

Y'r agent and three little helpers had entered to give the affair a little class and to offer learners a few suggestions. The prize money was secondary. Of course.

Our nom de course, "Hopefuls," showed our inner modesty. It also led to spelling errors, i.e., "Hopefuls," and another one that provoked wide mirth, "Hopeleses!"

The latter misspelling was pointed out to the author who merely sneered and said, "Matches your score."

He appeared ready to say more uncouth things but after a 16-pound bowling ball accidentally fell on his foot he became suddenly speechless.

Not a Drop . . . Except in Emergencies

The word "bonspiel," used in tempin bowling, may confuse you.

"Bonspiel" is a term usually reserved for curling, a sport ideal for people who like ice mixed between their scotch and soda. Bowlers don't drink. Unless it is absolutely necessary and unavoidable.

A case in point was a team which had rolled an early shift Saturday. Believing they were not scheduled to perform until Sunday, the lads repaired to the nearest health clinic for hops.

Late in the night one of the cast called Mayfair Lanes. "What time do we bowl Sunday?"

"You bowl," he was told, "in just a few minutes."

According to insiders, the boys gurgled right over to the bowling alley ("Look, it's right where we left it!") and took up positions on the 11 p.m. shift. A member of the team bowling against them was asked later how the boys were.

"Happy," he said. "Not successful, but happy."

So were Hopefuls in their first match. Their worthy opponents were "Coast Ventures," a Vancouver group featuring two chaps and two dolls.

The girls were not spectacular bowlers but in slim jims tailored just right their bowling did not command all the attention.

Just Bowl Until Your Arm Disappears

Except for the leadoff man whose name escapes me, Hopefuls broke alertly, took the lead in the backstretch and won with something in reserve as they say at the pony parlor.

The others in the cast who survived the burden of carrying youknowwho were the Messrs. Peter Salloway, Thomas Nute and Kenneth Munn. Official cheerleader, underpaid, was Jane Munn.

This was at 10:45 p.m. Saturday, well after our normal bedtime. But in a bowlspiel nobody thinks about going to bed. You finish one shift and then move the body to another set of lanes and crank your arm for another two hours or until it falls off.

Before our second match, Mr. Nute observed optimistically that we "could easily be slaughtered" by our foes, the Dynamiters. Mr. Nute is a great optimist. If somebody gave him a million dollars he would worry about how to spend it. This time he proved to be a peerless prophet.

The Dynamiters could be had, possibly, but not as long as Mr. Phil Schultz was bowling for them. He rammed a 604 down our windpipes while the Hopefuls' leadoff had the same figures—only in different places.

They hit us when we weren't looking, ma.

Amateurs All . . . Pure, Untarnished

It was 1:42 a.m. Sunday now and we prepared to toddle off for a long sleep. That's what you think, Clyde.

"Be on the line sharp at 10 a.m.," a fiendish voice cracked.

Bright and gay as infantrymen after a route march in the broiling sun, the Hopefuls reached heights of brilliance early Sunday.

All the members had kind words for the leadoff man. "No breakfast, eh?" asked Salloway. "Maybe you should bowl all the time on an empty stomach."

"Where you bin?" asked Nute courteously, referring to previous (and less sensational) scores.

"Let's eat," said Munn. We won. Of course.

Before our next set (in half an hour), Mr. Munn called a conference. He reminded us that we were no longer officially interested in the $400 first money but could still—if we didn't bowl like utter boobies—take home bowling balls.

There were two hitches. If we won our next event we would have to return at 5:30 p.m. for another roll—"just when the hockey game is on."

And if we went "all the way" we would lose our amateur standing.

So . . . we rolled our little hearts out.

Moss I tell you about it?

The name of the team that beat us was . . . Rolling Stones.

ALOUETTES WILL BUILD ALL-WEATHER STADIUM

MONTREAL (CP)—A 40,000-seat stadium, with provisions for an additional 25,000 seats and a transparent roof to permit all-weather sports events, will be built in the east end of Montreal Island by the Montreal Alouette Football Club, president M. E. (Ted) Workman announced today.

The stadium will be erected in three phases on a site near the proposed extension of the Trans-Canada Highway in suburban Ville d'Anjou. Initial plans call for a 40,000-seat structure of pre-cast concrete to be completed by July, 1965, at a cost of $2,200,000.

CALGARY GOLFERS HAPPY

These two Calgary swingers had reason for smiles Monday after qualifying rounds of annual Empress golf tournament. Mrs. Jo Robertson happily explains to Mike Pyke how she captured women's medal honors at Uplands. Mike, twice winner of men's crown, also had good day at Victoria Golf Club course, taking men's low-gross laurels with 71.

Bad News for Rivals—Pyke in Empress Chase

BOWLER OF WEEK

Fast start with blistering 257 game carried Carl Grzech (above) to men's tempin award in Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition. Grzech, who reached B.C. final this year, added games of 215 and 202 to finish with three-game tally of 674 in Men's Tempin League at Chemainus Bowlarena.

Mike Pyke is in the running again and that could be bad news for other divoters who started out today in the chase for the men's championship in the annual Empress golf tournament.

Only twice in 11 previous starts in the Empress fairway frolic had the 42-year-old insurance company executive from Calgary been able to qualify for the championship race.

But on both those occasions Pyke finished up with the title, making it last in 1962.

Pyke, a scratch player from the Calgary Golf and Country Club and 1960 Alberta amateur champion, earned one of the 32 qualifying spots Monday at the sun-bathed Oak Bay links by firing a two-over-par 71.

HURLBUTT LEADS
Despite Pyke's fine round, top honors for the day went to Max Hurlbutt, an eight-handicapper from the Mount Hood Country Club who fashioned a 75 for a net 67 to take the men's medal.

A former oil company executive who returned two years ago to the mountain community of Wenmore, about 40 miles from Portland, Hurlbutt belted a string of consistent shots in the 18-hole qualifying test.

Low-gross laurels were shared by Mrs. E. R. Dickinson, Victoria, and Mrs. J. L. Flynn, Ashland, Oregon. Both had net 92s.

Leading the way among women's qualifiers at Uplands was Calgary's Mrs. Jo Robertson, whose husband, Jack, took the men's medal last year.

Mrs. Robertson fired a net 72, one stroke ahead of club-mate Helen Johnson, women's medalist in 1963.

Low-gross laurels were shared by Mrs. E. R. Dickinson, Victoria, and Mrs. J. L. Flynn, Ashland, Oregon. Both had net 92s.

Comeback Marks Tenpin Bonspiel

When a team is behind 178 pins with only one game to catch up, the word usually is "forget it."

Trophy Shop disregarded the word, rolled a smashing 768 game and blasted their way into the semi-finals of the primary event in the first Vancouver Island tempin bonspiel Sunday.

The trophy men made up the deficit and added 76 pins for good measure in overcoming Lewis Shoes in a stirring quarter-final struggle.

The winners meet Duncan Leftovers, easy winners over Edits, in a semi-clash at Mayfair Lanes Saturday at 4 p.m. Castle Service meets Speedway Motors in the other semi. The winners meet at 7 p.m. for first prize of $400. Losers get $200 and defeated semi-finalists $100 each.

Speedways rode into the semis on a crackling 642 by anchor man Charles Cowie. Castle Service pulled the plug on Victoria Cleaning Service in the final game, scoring 732 to succeed by 32 pins.

Semi-finals of the Mayfair or B event brings together Duncan Bowling Centre and Alley Cats, Get Luckys and Independent Low Cost.

Semi-finalists in the Trophy Shop or C event are Rolling Stones and Seven-Up, Scotties and Amalgamated Roofers.

High single in weekend play was rolled by Jamie Walker of Courtenay. After lacklustre games of 153 and 137 he found the strike groove in the fourth frame and checked in with a 265.

YOU COULD HAVE BOWLED HIM OVER

'Migosh . . . There's My Wife!'

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP)—Jack Segriff has found a personal application of the old saying that "while the cat's away, the mice will play."

Saturday night, Jack, a 32-year-old father of four, kissed his wife and went on an expense-paid dinner-dancing date with pretty model Joanne Gayre, 19, of Toronto, first prize in a bowling contest he won here recently.

Then, as Jack said, he "almost fainted" when wife Audrey walked into the hotel with an escort.

Jack had had the choice of taking his wife on the date while the model baby sat for him or taking the model and winning his wife a spring out-

If Mails on Time Abel Is Dead Duck

DETROIT (CP)—If the mails in Toronto are on time today, and Clarence Campbell has a rope and halter, he should have enough evidence to hang Detroit Red Wing coach Sid Abel from the rafters.

But the National Hockey League president doesn't have to look for the postman. He can get the evidence first hand from Abel at Toledo, Ohio, where Red Wing players are stoking up for their showdown sixth Stanley Cup semi-final game tonight against Chicago.

A loss would send the Wings packing for another year while the Hawks meet either Toronto or Montreal in the cup final. A victory would end them into unfriendly Chicago stadium Thursday night for the decisive seventh game.

Abel isn't backing down from the "outright steal" charges he fired at referee Frank Udvari after Wings 3-2 loss in Chicago Sunday night that sent Hawks into a 3-2 lead in games.

"You're damned right I said those things," the still sizzling Abel said Monday in Toledo. "I don't deny anything. I'll probably hear from him (Campbell) tomorrow."

NOT WORRIED

Abel wasn't worried, although he realized that Campbell most likely would slap him with a fine for his "insinuations."

Some of the evidence Campbell wanted before deciding what to do about the one-time great Red Wing player appeared in Detroit newspapers Monday. The papers were sent to him in Toronto.

Abel said Udvari "blew it" when he allowed the third period goal by Ken Wharram of the Hawks that tied the score 2-2. Stan Mikita scored the winner with about four minutes remaining in the game. Abel didn't hesitate to tell Udvari what he thought of his call on the Wharram goal and what he thought of Udvari.

EVERY NAME IN BOOK

"I called him every name in the book the rest of the game and he didn't say a thing. He didn't have a gut left to call a penalty on our bench."

"I've never seen anything like this in all the time I've been in hockey. It was just a steal."

Campbell confirmed Monday that he had received a wire from Bruce Norris, owner of the Wings, asking that the league send another referee to Chicago Thursday, provided a seventh game in the series is necessary.

Campbell said there is no way Norris or anyone else can have the referees' schedule changed. "That was set out at a board of governors' meeting before the playoffs and agreed on unanimously," Campbell said. "Neither I, nor Carl Voss nor anyone else can change it now."

WHERE WAS PUCK?

The point of the controversial call centered on where the puck was when Udvari blew the whistle.

Red Wings argued it went in after the whistle had blown to stop play. Was it trapped on the outside of the webbing by rookie goalkeeper Roger Crozier or had Wharram, as he said, taken another whack at it and knocked it in?

That question probably never will be answered to the satisfaction of all but it certainly lit a fuse under the Red Wing bench and on the ice.

Abel also violated an unwritten rule by calling Red Wings to beat Hawks tonight. He won't be expelled but this is one prediction coaches never make.

fit. He decided on the model and outfit.

But the sponsors of the tournament, decided that Jack shouldn't have all the fun, had found his wife in a coin laundry and told her she was going on a date with an escort of her own.

Jack? When he got over the shock, he went quietly home with his wife.

MEETS BETTER ONE

'Best Goalie' On the Spot

TORONTO (CP)—The "best goalie in the world" will face one tonight who has been just a little bit better.

If this sounds like a contradiction, probably it is.

The best-in-the-world label is manager-coach Punch Imlach's description of Johnny Bower of his Toronto Maple Leafs and the man who has been sharper is little Charlie Hodge of Montreal Canadiens.

Hodge and the Leafs, who lead the series 3-2, arrived Monday night for the sixth—and possibly last—game of their Stanley Cup semi-final with the Leafs.

Imlach departed from habit Monday to name Bower as the man who will be between the pipes tonight. Usually the choice between old John and alternate goalie Don Simmons is not made until just before game time.

Although Imlach calls Bower "my best man over 70 games of the schedule" and ranks him as mankind's ultimate in goaltending excellence, he admits the difference between Montreal and Toronto so far has been Hodge.

"There's no doubt about it. Hodge has had more going for him than our fellow. We're the better team and we've been playing better ball, but Hodge has come up with what Montreal needs."

Although Imlach intends to stay on the Bower bandwagon, he screamed for help Monday to patch up his forward and defence units. From Rochester Americans he called up National Hockey League veterans Kent Douglas, Al Arbour, Ed Litzenberger and Gerry Ehman.

One will dress tonight to fill out the playoff roster of 17 men—the first five games were played with 16—but Imlach declined to say which American Leaguer will get the finger.

NO INJURIES
So far, all the sickness has struck the opposition. The Leafs have suffered their losses in the peak of condition.

Montreal has been without the services of Gilles Tremblay, a speedy winger and prolific scorer, who broke an ankle when he got in the way of a slapshot. Big Jean Beliveau, the flag around whom the boys rally, missed Saturday's game and is a doubtful starter tonight because of damaged knee ligaments.

Violent stomach illness struck Bernie Geoffrion after Saturday's game in Montreal, but the big right winger is expected to put on the gloves tonight. Centre Henri Richard, butted in the head by Eddie Shack last week, got a lump on his head Saturday when a Montreal fan hurled "an object" into the players' bench.

If a seventh series game is necessary, it will be played in Montreal Thursday.

This is where we'll beat them."

Protests Plentiful As Broders Bopped

WINNIPEG (CP)—Rulings on two protests were awaited today in the wake of Winnipeg-Buffaloes' 85-65 Monday night victory over Lethbridge Broders in the opener of the best-of-five Western Senior basketball final.

The Buffaloes played the game under protest on the grounds that Ken Larsen of Lethbridge is ineligible for competition.

At the same time Lethbridge lodged a formal protest claiming that the Buffaloes failed to have their Canadian Amateur Basketball Association registration cards available prior to game time.

Officials said both protests were forwarded to the association office in Willowdale, Ont., and fast replies are hoped for. Buffaloes claim that Larsen is ineligible because he played several games with the Winnipeg club last fall and left in early December.

The Winnipeg club upset the defending Canadian champions with a fast-breaking offence and a tight man-to-man defence.

Team members are Betty and Lorne Whyte, Gerry and George Robbins and Bill Donnelly.

Gar's Trophies was second and Misfits third.

Tribe Hires Solly Hemus

TUCSON, ARIZ. (AP)—The Cleveland Indians Saturday hired Solly Hemus, 40, former St. Louis Cardinals manager, to coach third base.

The regular Cleveland third base coach, George Strickland, is managing the American League club until Birdie Tebbets recovers from a heart attack.

In announcing the appointment, Gabe Paul, the Tribe's general manager and president, said Hemus is being hired only until Tebbets returns to work. Doctors say Tebbets will need at least two months to recover, and he is not expected to be back this season.

Olympians Take Playoff Title

Olympians have completed the Victoria Water Polo League season without tasting defeat.

The Victoria Amateur Swimming Club squad marched through the regular season with a string of victories and Sunday won the playoff crown in two triumphs at the Royal Roads pool.

Getting two goals from Trevor Cole and one from Ken Burnett, Olympians defeated Victoria YMCA 3-2 in the playoff final. Brian Pearce and Brian Smedley counted for the Y.

In semifinal games, Olympians nipped Navy 2-1 and YMCA blanked University of Victoria 3-0.

Koufax Keeps Hex on Yanks

By The Canadian Press

A few New York Yankee stalwarts probably will have a midsummer summit meeting with Sandy Koufax at the All-Star game. The rest would be happy if they don't see him again until the midwinter banquet circuit.

The Yankees' World Series nemesis of last October, who lost to the American League champions earlier in the spring training season, reasserted his mastery Monday in an impressive six-inning stint as Los Angeles Dodgers emerged with a 5-1 victory.

He was comparatively generous to Mickey Mantle, who had been one of his chief victims when the chips were down last fall, conceding him a double that drove in the only Yankee run in the sixth inning. But Mickey's teammates managed only four other hits and one base on balls while Sandy chalked up six strikeouts during his workout.

Maury Wills and Frank Howard had two hits apiece and Willie Davis stole two bases to highlight the Dodgers' assault on rookie Bob Meyer, who was tagged with the loss.

Ken Johnson, Houston Colts' hard-luck right hander, pitched perfect ball for six of the seven innings he worked against Milwaukee Braves but lost 2-1 when he yielded four consecutive singles in the second frame.

Robin Roberts and Chuck Estrada combined to hand St. Louis Cardinals their first shutout of the exhibition campaign as Baltimore Orioles picked up an unearned run in the ninth inning to edge the Red Birds 1-0. Roger Craig, a victim of 12 shutouts with New York Mets last season, was the loser.

1,200 Seek Summer Jobs

University of Victoria is producing job applicants faster than the community can provide jobs.

Unless there is a marked tourist boom or economic upturn in the business and industrial line, no more students than usual can expect summer jobs or permanent employment here.

"We hope eventually to place everybody. We never do, of course," said placement officer Roy H. Archdekin.

It is still too early to forecast the job situation statistically, he said, but if the season follows the usual pattern, nearly all applicants will be placed by mid-summer.

A summary of applications, placements and earnings is not usually compiled until the fall when students have returned to classes.

1,200 APPLY

There are 1,200 applicants on file now, Mr. Archdekin said. The men will earn $600 to $800, or about half the amount needed to support themselves during the academic year. Women make even less—$300 to $500 for their summer's work.

Yet, some specialized students can make close to $500 a month in the 4½ months until registration.

A machinist, for example, can earn $2.50 an hour. A skilled pulp mill hand can make $2.16.

But most students remaining in Victoria to work depend on the provincial government, a few industries, some federal government jobs, specialty shops and the hotel and catering industry.

LOW PAID

The latter are in the lowest-paying category and rely on the tourist season. If it's a good season there will be lots of work, perhaps plenty of tips.

About half of the 23 students associated with Uvic's Shakespearean festival in July and August have been placed for local summer jobs. One applicant is a qualified surveyor.

"But he's not going to get many surveying jobs on Douglas Street, and that's where he'll have to work," Mr. Archdekin said.

Normally the boy would get summer work, at a wage he

Union Tries To Organize Meat Packers

Victoria's wholesale meat processors may soon be unionized, a union official said Monday.

United Packing House Workers' International representative Bill Symington said the Victoria packers are the last unorganized in the country.

The union is conducting a campaign to bring workers at Canada Packers, Burns and Swifts under the union mantle. Union rate is $2.07 per hour.

BIG CHANGES

Organization became necessary, Mr. Symington said, when a "revolution" in the meat-packing industry brought plants to Victoria to replace branch offices.

Some processors are slaughtering meat themselves as well, he said.

He will investigate the position at Alberta Meat Market, he said, although he hasn't been in touch with the 11-month strike there.

Strikebound market proprietor John Williams claimed recently he was the "only organized wholesaler" in Victoria (with Amalgamated Meatcutters') and the competition was unfair.

LCB Terminates Rotation System On Liquor Orders

Bar brand liquor restrictions have been lifted by the provincial government.

Liquor Control Board chairman Col. Donald McGugan said today the restrictions had proved "pretty difficult" to enforce.

Under an order issued last fall, cocktail bars were not allowed to buy more than 20 per cent of any one brand of liquor for general use.

The restriction was aimed at forcing bars to rotate the brands they buy so no single distillery would be favored.

But it did not work for two reasons:

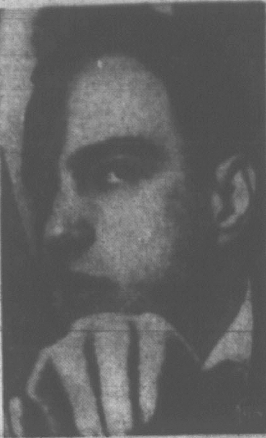

There were too many different brands of low-priced liquor; Some Canadian distillers boosted their prices last week.

The price changes boosted only some of the cheaper brands.

Col. McGugan said it would not now be fair to enforce the 20 per cent rule.

Bars would be forced to pay more for some brands in order to rotate their stock.

"We have left it up to the vendors to see they don't patronize one firm entirely," Col. McGugan said.

Pollution Fear Blocks Housing

A plan to discharge untreated sewage into Cordova Bay has been blocked temporarily by the B.C. Pollution Board.

Insufficient information about tides was given as the reason in a letter Saanich council received and filed at Monday night's meeting.

Application was made by the municipality on behalf of Capistrano Estates Ltd., a firm planning an Uplands-type of residential development near Sayward Beach.

Board secretary C. J. Keenan wrote that the effect of the sewage on the sea waters is impossible to predict on the basis of the inadequate tidal information on hand.

Residents of the area have campaign against the proposed sewage outfall near Noble Creek because they feel the water will be polluted.

The board's letter added:

"If the district of Saanich can clearly show, with evidence from tidal surveys in the area, that no detrimental effects will occur to impair the recreational values of Cordova Bay as a result of sewage being discharged as proposed, the board will be pleased to reconsider."

Three hundred acres of land near the northern end of Sayward Beach have been acquired for the new housing development.

Most of it is the old Turner farm, and some of it was acquired from Bill Mattick, who owns adjoining property.

LEVESQUE

Terrorists Arrested

BOLZANO (Reuters) — Police have announced that 17 persons suspected of being involved in a terrorist organization in the Italian south Tyrol had been arrested.

Quebec Minister 'Fish and Fowl'

MONTREAL (CP)—A leading separatist says Rene Levesque, Quebec's natural resources minister, is often regarded as separatist at heart but is really "a federalist in disguise."

Hubert Aquin, an executive member of le Rassemblement pour l'Indepence Nationale (the national independence rally), told a meeting of the organization Sunday night that Mr. Levesque "has tried to be both fish and fowl."

In one of the bitterest attacks ever made by a separatist on Mr. Levesque, Mr. Aquin said the controversial cabinet minister "presents the true picture of a cavilling reformer who knocks down walls that are already falling."

Earlier Sunday Mr. Levesque told a meeting of La Ligue d'Action Nationale (the League for National Action), a conservative nationalist group, that it is "absolutely necessary" for Quebec's French-speaking majority to "respect that 20 per cent of the population of Quebec that does not share our culture."

"If they live in Quebec, they have the same rights as we and no matter what the Quebec we live in, they are and always will be our fellow-citizens."

Speakers other than Mr. Aquin at the RIN meeting, attended by about 400 persons, denounced the Queen's planned visit to Quebec in October. Pierre Bourgault, a frequent RIN spokesman and a reporter for the daily newspaper La Presse, said "the Queen will not be welcome in Quebec when she comes next fall."

If
are the same how come you can get better mileage with B-A?

The reason is simply this: you can get better mileage because with B-A you use less gasoline.

Why? Well here are four good reasons.

First, B-A Gasolines are specially weather-formulated each month to compensate for regional and seasonal temperature changes. This means you get fast, positive starting and fast warm-ups. As a result, you use less gasoline during these operations.

Secondly, B-A Gasolines contain a special detergent to keep your carburetor clean. This gives you smoother idling and positive pick-up which means you use less gasoline.

Also, B-A Gasolines burn clean and prevent combustion deposits that rob your car of power. Result—you use less gasoline.

Finally, B-A Gasolines are final-filtered at the pump to eliminate harmful dirt particles that could interfere with your car's proper performance and waste gasoline.

This is why we say you can get better mileage with B-A Gasolines.

So switch today. Move up to B-A Gasolines.

Princess Walks Out On Trip

AMSTERDAM (AP)—The wedding of Dutch Princess Irene and Don Carlos of Spain will take place outside The Netherlands, it was announced today.

The announcement was made by Miss C. C. Winnen, private secretary to Princess Irene. It was read to the press by Dr. J. Van Der Hoeven, private secretary to the queen, after Queen Juliana, Prince Bernhard and Crown Princess Beatrix had left for a 10-day state visit to Mexico.

Irene who officially was scheduled to accompany her parents and sister surprisingly stayed behind at the last minute.

Miss Winnen's statement said that Irene "in accordance with the expressed wish of her future husband, decided to join immediately in his work with all the ensuing consequences."

FORESTALL TROUBLES
The cognomine continued: "Therefore, she will not participate in the state visit to Mexico in order to separate fully her personal responsibility from the obligations of the royal family, which would not be to create any political difficulties for the queen."

"As a result of this," the statement concluded, "their marriage will be performed outside The Netherlands."

Monday, Princess Irene and her fiancé Prince Carlos Bourbon-Parma were received by Pope Paul in private audience at the Vatican.

Disclosure several months ago that the princess had converted to Roman Catholicism created a sensation in her country.

She won approval for her engagement only after giving up succession rights to the Dutch throne in order to marry the prince, pretender to the Spanish throne.

Act-for-Free Role to Win Huston Oscar?

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Odds-on favorite to win this year's Oscar as best supporting actor is a lean, lanky Irishman who acts for free and couldn't care less whether he ever acts again.

And the Oscar? If he wins—as most experts predict—it will be no novelty. He won in 1938 for best director and best screenwriter. He also helped his father win an Oscar for the same movie—The Treasure of the Sierra Madre.

How did director John Huston get cast as the cardinal-archbishop of Boston in Otto Preminger's The Cardinal?

"My agent is Ingo Preminger, Otto's brother," says Huston. "He is also his brother's agent."

"Otto told Ingo that he wanted a John Huston type to play the part. Ingo said there is no such thing as a John Huston type except John Huston. So Ingo suggested to his brother that he cast me. It was all very simple."

When the picture came out, one important critic wrote that Huston's father couldn't have played the role better. His father, of course, was the late Walter Huston whom the Russian director Stanislavsky once called the greatest actor in the world.

CANT AGREE
"I can't say I agree with that critic," says the son. Huston took no money for the role.

"Some day I'll need an Otto Preminger type in one of my pictures and I hope to get Otto—who used to be an actor—for the same price," he said. Huston recently renounced his U.S. citizenship for Irish nationality. He makes his permanent home in county Galway.

"I believe a person should be a citizen of the country where he lives," he argues. He has lived in Ireland for 12 years. He is a big man in Galway where he is master of fox hounds.

But he will be even bigger when The Cardinal plays in that predominantly Roman Catholic country.

"I'm afraid some of my Irish drinking companions can't see me as the cardinal type—but it was nice that Otto did," said Huston.

"I'm really amazed at all the furore the role caused. I thought I was just helping out a fellow director."

NEW SLANT Tourist Ads Hit Prairies

B.C. is slanting tourist advertising to the Prairies this year.

A provincial travel bureau official said this is one result of a tourist survey made last year by a public relations firm.

The survey showed a terrific increase in Prairie tourists through the Rogers Pass Highway.

As a result the travel bureau is preparing a new tourist promotion booklet and increasing its Prairie advertising, the official said.

New Map Issued By Lands Office

A new seven-color map of B.C. has been produced by the provincial lands department.

The map—scale one inch to 30 miles—lists all post offices, has up-to-date road information, including a mileage chart, and shows major parks.

Inset are more detailed maps of the Victoria and Vancouver areas.

The map replaces a 1957 edition. It is available to the public for 90 cents from the Surveys and Mapping Branch of the Lands Department.

Saanich Adds 'If' To Joint Project

Saanich may go along with a joint centennial project for Greater Victoria—if it likes the project.

At a meeting Monday evening, Saanich council authorized its representatives on the Greater Victoria Centennial Committee to go ahead with discussions for a joint project.

But at least one councillor thinks Saanich should go it alone.

Coun. Leslie Passmore told council he feels Saanich should have its own project—a fountain and landscaping for the projected new municipal hall.

Tattersall Drive residents presented a petition to council Monday night protesting proposed development of their road as an east-west thoroughfare.

AWAIT SURVEY

They asked that no work be done until the current Greater Victoria traffic survey is completed, probably some time late this summer. Municipal engineer Neville Life told council no new work is scheduled to begin before then.

Several councillors said they believe the survey will endorse the Tattersall development anyway.

Major sewerage requested by residents in the area bounded by Ruby Road, Cedar Hill Road, and the sea will be deferred until a Saanich sewer survey is complete.

Mr. Life recommended to council that work go ahead drafting a bylaw to sewer small sections of the area where work would fit in conveniently with sewage installations in Gordon Head already scheduled for a residents' vote in Gordon Head.

SUBDIVISION STUDY

The whole question of minimum lot size for subdivision is being reconsidered, councillors revealed at the meeting.

A Piedmont Drive woman wrote to council saying she is suffering hardship because she is not allowed to subdivide her land.

Council told her the subdivision rule is under reconsideration.

Bylaw at present prohibits subdivision of lots less than 1.6 acres in most of rural Saanich.

It has come under heavy fire almost since the bylaw was passed last year.

CANADIAN STRATFORD COMPANY

Sparkling Performance Praised by U.K. Critics

CHICHESTER (Reuters)—Canada's Stratford Festival Company was given a triumphant reception Monday night at the Chichester Festival Theatre when it opened a three-week English season in honor of the 400th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth.

Though the company, formed 11 years ago, had been seen at the Edinburgh Festival in Scotland in 1956, it was its first appearance in England. The interest was all the greater because the Chichester theatre was modelled on the Canadian players' home at Stratford, Ont.

The play chosen for this much-awaited debut was a beguiling production by English director Michael Langham of Love's Labor's Lost.

John Colicos spoke Berowne's praise of love beautifully, Eric House made an agreeable French top of Boyet and William Hutt, as the fantastical Spaniard Don Adriano, presented a wonderful study of autumnal quixotry.

Frances Hyland sparkled as the princess of France and Martha Henry was a spirited Rosaline.

CALL COMPANY BACK

The company was called back six-times for curtain calls. The Manchester Guardian critic, Christopher Driver, says "never was Love's Labor less of a duty, a production more ecstatically received, or the open stage more triumphantly vindicated."

Bernard Levin of The Daily Mail praises the production and the company and says that the latter "as a whole certainly live up to their surroundings and their reputation."

Eric Shorter of The Daily Telegraph says: "Who can hope to catch half the allusions (in the play) and having done so still enjoy them? Well, this is what makes the Canadians remarkable. They succeed in making us do so."

Daily Express critic Clive Barnes says "perhaps the most memorable performance came from William Hutt, one of the company's four original members, who gave dignified fantasy to the broken, ridiculous figure of Don Armado. But all the acting was good."

The other two plays to be presented in repertory with Love's Labor's Lost during the season are a new production in English or Moliere's Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme, directed by Canadian Jean Gascon, and Shakespeare's Timon of Athens in modern dress, directed by Langham.

The Evening Standard is almost lyrical in its enthusiasm, describing the performance as a "bubbling extravaganza."

"Words, words, words, washed over you and from the apron stage—enchanted, bewitching, remorseless, almost meaningless occasionally because of vanished allusions, sometimes beating you on the head with their punning... the total effect was fine."

CALLER UNNECESSARY

'Stricken' Residents Fight Sports Centre

Residents of Marrion, Bee and Goldsmith Streets are strongly opposed to Oak Bay's proposal to build a recreation centre at the southeast corner of Foul Bay and Cadboro Bay Roads.

A protest petition, spearheaded by Bert Howell of 2064 Marrion Street, has been delivered to the municipal hall.

Mr. Howell said he has received many calls from residents along Foul Bay Road and Brighton Avenue asking him to organize another petition for that area.

"I think it is a silly thing. We've already got the city arena and the Crystal Garden," said Mr. Howell.

"Consensus is that it is unnecessary."

A mother of two school-age children, Mrs. S. C. Cameron, 1941 Bee Street, favors a recreation centre but is disturbed about losing her home site.

"We were in favor of a recreation centre and this is an ideal location but still we are disturbed about it."

"But," she added, "we won't get up and fight it."

Mrs. G. Tocher, 2024 Marrion, said, "We are all up in arms about it."

Mrs. H. S. Oliver, 2042 Goldsmith said, "I don't think much of it. It seems they don't care at all about the older people—all they care about is the younger people."

Mrs. H. Radford, 1916 Bee Street, said,

"I feel we should have been notified. I don't like the high-handed way in which they are doing this."

Oak Bay ratepayers will vote on the centre on April 25.

$50 Fine Too Low Judge Tells Minor

NANAIMO—Magistrate Lionel Beevor-Potts said Monday fines for minors caught on licensed premises should be increased, or else fines for conviction of a bartender or hotel involved in selling to a minor should be reduced.

The maximum penalty for minors charged under the Liquor Act is $50, and the minimum fine for a hotel employee serving a minor is $300, and the company he works for, $1,000.

He made the comments

SOD-TURNING ceremony at the Queen of Angels Catholic School, corner of Trouhalem and Maple Bay Roads, will be conducted by Bishop Remi de Roo Thursday at 4 p.m. The $200,000 school is expected to be completed in September. It will replace St. Ann's School which has been operating in Duncan for the past 100 years.

FIRE HITS ABANDONED FERRY SLIP

NANAIMO—A disused CPR ferry slip at Nanoose Bay was badly damaged by fire Monday night.

Cause of the blaze was not determined but it burned stubbornly for four hours before it was brought under control by Lantzville volunteer firemen.

The firemen had difficulty reaching the flames, which soared 30 feet and more above the crescented pilings of the old slip. On their way they had to place heavy planks across caved-in culverts on the access road.

The middle section of the slip, including a ramp and elevator, were destroyed.

Nanoose Bay is about 15 miles northwest of here.

when he fined Brian Delcourt, 20, $50 after the youth was convicted of being a minor found on licensed premises. Delcourt was caught drinking beer in a hotel beer parlor just outside Nanaimo on March 20.

"I regret this is the heaviest I can make the fine for this offence. It is high time the penalty was increased, or else the fines for conviction of a bartender or hotel involved in selling to a minor should be reduced," he said.

Five minors were convicted Monday in the magistrate's court on charges laid under the Liquor Act.

NANAIMO—Alvin Joseph Jean Monday pleaded guilty to making an illegal U-turn at a city intersection, but Magistrate Lionel Beevor-Potts changed the plea to not guilty without consulting the accused man.

Jean pleaded guilty to making the illegal U-turn, but said there was no sign at the intersection prohibiting a U-turn.

The magistrate said: "Correct, and I am changing your plea to not guilty." Trial date will be set later.

NORTH COWICHAN—A request from trustees of the Duncan-United Church to establish a proper right of way to the one-acre Pioneer Cemetery on Herd Road near Maple Bay, is being considered by council.

Reeve Donald Morton said the municipality will assist with the project.

Trustees said they will bear the cost of buying the land for the road, grading and fencing, if the council carries out the legalities, the survey and takes over ownership of the road.

GANGES — Salt Spring Island Farmers' Institute agreed at its annual meeting to turn over to the public library its old minute books for safe keeping and reference use.

George Heinekey was re-elected president.

Directors elected were: Tom Butt, Cyril Beech, P. G. James, E. H. Greary; Frank Stevens and William Palmer, auditors, and Mrs. J. McNulty, secretary-treasurer.

JANINE

Danish Girl Crowned Miss Nanaimo

NANAIMO — A 19-year-old Danish-born Nanaimo High School girl has been crowned Miss Nanaimo.

She is Janine Blechberg, sponsored by the Nanaimo Gyro Club. Janine succeeds Sandra Hole, Miss Nanaimo in 1963.

Judges chose Leona White and Sandra Cass to be Janine's princess.

Sandra is a 17-year-old Grade 11 student at Nanaimo Senior High. Leona is the daughter of Chief Douglas White of the Nanaimo Indian band. She is 17.

The three girls will ride on the lead float in the May parade here.

The new Miss Nanaimo came from Denmark 12 years ago, and lived in Edmonton for 12 years before coming to Vancouver Island. She speaks English and French fluently.

Janine will compete for the title of Miss PNE in August.

Judges were Mrs. Joe Clark of New Westminster; Roberta Weber, Miss Campbell River of 1963; and Bruce Brown, a lawyer from Qualicum.

ACCUSED MAN DRINKING ON DAY GIRL STABBED

NANAIMO—An Assize Court jury was told Monday that 43-year-old Robert Morley joined three other men in a wine-drinking party the day a 10-year-old Alert Bay girl was stabbed to death.

Morley, an Alert Bay hospital orderly, is charged with capital murder in the Nov. 7 death of Rosalind Louise Wadhams.

Witness Floyd Clark told the court he, Morley and two other men were drinking Nov. 7 at a cabin on a beach near Alert Bay.

Testimony will continue today in the trial presided over by Mr. Justice J. S. Atkins of Vancouver.

DUNCAN ROUNDUP

Aldermen Withdraw Cricket Club Bylaw

DUNCAN—The city's cricket ground bylaw, which would have rezoned the property on Wharmcliffe Road for recreational purposes only, was withdrawn by city council Monday night.

The motion was initiated by Ald. Robert Mason.

Council had previously offered to purchase the Cricket Club grounds for $17,000. Local taxpayers passed a plebiscite permitting the expenditure of the money last December.

However, a few weeks ago, the club informed council it would not accept less than $20,000 for the land. Council refused to pay that amount and decided to rezone the property for recreational use only.

There was no discussion on withdrawal of the bylaw.

A motion favoring the conversion of King's Daughters' Hospital into a non-profit nursing home for elderly people was approved by council.

The motion was passed after Ken Noton, hospital administrator, asked council's opinion on the proposed project, following the completion of the new $3,500,000 Cowichan District Hospital.

The Cowichan School Board Monday agreed to submit a second brief to the B.C. highways department requesting the use of portable traffic signs at school crossings over the Trans-Canada Highway.

The department has refused their erections. The highways department contends the signs would pose a traffic hazard. Trustee Wilf Peck told the

GOV'T URGED TO BUY POTHOLES

SOOKE — Bob Gibson, president of the Sooke-Jordan River Chamber of Commerce, today urged the provincial parks branch to buy property around the Sooke River potholes for development into a recreational area.

"The chambers concerned at the lack of parks from Sooke to Port Renfrew to cope with the needs of the expanding population south of the Malahat," he said. "Here in Sooke we need a park badly."

Property surrounding the potholes, situated three miles north of Milne's Landing, is privately owned.

But the owners have not prevented picnicking on the property.

FAVORITE PROPERTY

This section of the river, which includes natural ponds for swimming, has been for years a favorite place for weekend outings.

Mr. Gibson said the increasing population of Sooke, and the influx of visitors from Victoria, has created an acute park problem in Sooke.

This was further aggravated by the alienation of nearly all waterfront property from Sooke to Jordan River, he said.

He said the only park in the immediate area was Sooke Mountain Park, north of the village.

EXCHANGE

But he said the park will not be suitable for recreational use for many years as the native timber along Shields Lake was sold by the government in exchange for park land elsewhere.

Arthur Mayse

Once in a novel, I caused a middle-aged character to warn a pair of young ones that what they would most regret in later life wasn't the thing done but the chance passed by, the opportunity let slip.

For this reflection, quite a few readers jumped me. The sum of their protests was that I had allowed my guy to argue a doctrine which could cause no end of trouble.

But they didn't change my thinking.

"Look before you leap" is wise counsel, and as one who has all too often hopped from frying pan to fire, I second it fervently. If one looks too long, though, the leap may never be made; and that can be a great pity.

One April when fortune had widened her smile to an outright grin, we took ourselves off with pockets jingling to New York.

Spring had turned Manhattan into a magic island. As a further enchantment, South Pacific—the first-run South Pacific with Ezio Pinza and Mary Martin—had opened on Broadway.

The show was sold to the hilt, but a writer friend knew a scalper who might have a pair of tickets. He did, and he wanted forty bucks apiece for them.

We shillyeared and shillyeared. We dithered and dithered. Finally we settled for another show, the name of which I can't for the life of me recall.

When we did get to see South Pacific years after, Martin was no longer washing Pinza out of her hair. The wonder-musical had become just another Hollywood spectacular through which we sat glumly wishing we'd grabbed that New York scalper's pasteboards.

You see my point? By an excess of prudence, we did ourselves out of an enriching experience. That hasn't been the only time, either. We might, for instance, have started married life several years earlier if we hadn't weighed the pros and cons so all-fired thoroughly.

We were in a hollow tree

at the time, sheltering from a gale that was beating up Vancouver's Stanley Park. Outside, the wind roared and saplings crashed, but in our scooped-out cedar snag, all was homey.

I had sold a few stories to minor markets. By hard work and a touch of luck, we could make a living out of fiction. One of our up-Island friends had a cabin . . . all right, shack . . . on his place which he would let us have, along with a scrap of waterfront, for nothing down and peanuts later.

We could live on trout, wild-beef, love and the occasional story sale, and the depression had to end sometime, didn't it?

It was a lovely prospect, and we should have scampered straight from our hollow tree to the licence bureau.

But we let a week go by, and another, and presently our brave notion was buried under a mountain of practical objections.

Sure, maybe it wouldn't have worked. That doesn't stop us from sparing a sigh whenever we pass those verdant and valuable acres . . . a few of which might have been ours, with extra years together as a bonus.

What might have been right for a couple of depression kids with all to gain and nothing to lose could well be disastrous for youngsters in today's radically different world. By no means do I advocate the blind plunge off the high board . . . after all, the pool could be empty. Of the times when we did act in haste, the results haven't always fulfilled our hopes. There have been moves we regretted later, claims that yielded fool's gold only.

Surprisingly often, though, the decision brisily made and firmly adhered to in spite of all gloom-crying proves the right one.

Esquimalt-based ships have delivered to Hong Kong two tons of clothing donated by Victorians for needy Oriental children.

The 100 bags of garments were unloaded last Thursday from HMCS Fraser and Mackenzie, and turned over to the Hong Kong Junior Chamber of Commerce for distribution. It was learned here today in a dispatch from the ships.

Donated through the Save the Children Fund here and collected by the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce, the clothing was first loaded into HMCS St. Laurent.

She and the two other destroyer escorts left Esquimalt Jan. 7 for a four-month cruise to the Orient.

The bags of clothing were unloaded in Singapore in February, and the ships went on into the Indian Ocean for participation in a Commonwealth exercise.

HEADS WEST

It ended March 17, and the St. Laurent headed west around the world.

HMCS Fraser and Mackenzie returned to Singapore en route for Victoria, and picked up the clothing for delivery to Hong Kong.

Benjamin Wong, president of Hong Kong Jaycees, and J. B. Atkinson, secretary of the Hong Kong council of social services, thanked Captain G. H. Hayes, commander of the Second Canadian Escort Squadron, for the clothing.

Arrangements for delivery had been made by Lieut. Cmdr. John Watson, executive officer HMCS Fraser, working with Mrs. W. W. McGill, head of the Save the Children Fund in Victoria.

Rom Knott Fund For Ball Park Nears $3,000

The fund for Rom Knott Memorial Park is nearing the $3,000 mark, and donations are still coming in.

A house-to-house canvass in Central Saanich raised $1,898 on the evening of April 23.

"We've had several donations since," Mrs. Stan Bickford, wife of the treasurer, said today.

It's getting pretty near the $3,000 level.

The goal is to raise $5,000 to purchase two acres of property for a ball park dedicated to the late Mr. Knott, well-known sportsman killed in a Pat Bay Highway accident, March 4.

The property adjoins Brentwood Community Hall.

Donations are still being accepted by Mr. Bickford at 7011 West Saanich Road.

DEs LEAVING TO MEET NEW SISTER

Three destroyer escorts are leaving Esquimalt Wednesday for two weeks of anti-submarine exercises with the U.S. Navy.

HMCS Skeena, Saskatchewan, and Margaree will go to San Diego and form a greeting party for HMCS Qu'Appelle, coming through the Panama Canal to join Pacific command.

Saskatchewan, Margaree and Qu'Appelle will arrive at Esquimalt April 24. Skeena's return date has not yet been announced.

Also going out Wednesday is submarine HMCS Grilse, starting her first phase of sea trials.

She has just undergone a complete refit, the first sub to do so in a Canadian shipyard.

Grilse was in HMC Dockyard for four months until dockside tests began early in March.

PLANNING, PLANNING, PLANNING!

There were indications today that City Hall is planning to plan its planning functions for more effective use.

Victoria branch of the Community Planning Association of Canada wrote City Hall suggesting the time has come to coordinate all city planning positions by amalgamating them into a single department.

It urged "the existing separate planning sections comprising the special projects department, the zoning office, the advisory planning commission, staff and other planning operations still in the engineering office be all combined directly under the city manager as a unit."

It said such a department would plan roads, zoning regulations and also issue the building permits.

City manager Dennis Young said such a move is one of several approaches he is considering in a report to be made soon to city council aimed at improving the scattered planning functions.

But he added the important point that the CPAC letter did not go far enough because planning involves financial budgeting as well as physical programs.

$1 MILLION ST. JOSEPH'S MODERNIZATION

Hospital Project Set to Start

A $1,053,000 construction project will begin this week at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Fast start was planned by Burns and Dutton Construction Ltd. of Richmond after a meeting with hospital officials last week. The project was approved by the provincial government a week ago.

It involves construction of a new laundry building, renovation of the food service department, expansion of the emergency ward, medical records and administration areas, construction of a transformer vault for the new electrical distribution service and location of the admitting and information departments.

The project is Phase 2 in a three-stage program of modernizing and enlarging the hospital.

It will take about 14 months to complete.

A separate contract for installation of a new passenger elevator, to cost $60,000, is expected to be completed in about a month.

Equipment to be installed in Phase 2 construction projects will add $476,000 to the total cost.

Uvic Buildings Sold For Catholic School

Campus Site Fetches $500,000

By AB KENT

University of Victoria Lansdowne campus will become the site of a Roman Catholic junior-senior secondary school for boys and girls.

Purchase of the Young and Ewing buildings on 11.6 acres of land for a sum "in excess of half a million dollars" was announced jointly by university development board chairman Harold B. Elworthy and Bishop of Victoria Remi De Roo.

The sale marks the first major step in disposal of the buildings and 54 acres of land comprising Lansdowne campus in the university's plan to consolidate at Gordon Head.

BOARD TO BUY

Greater Victoria School Board, subject to approval of ratepayers, has decided to buy the third major structure on Lansdowne campus, the E. B. Paul building.

This will make the Roman Catholic separate school complex within a shout of the proposed school district 61 administrative centre.

Bishop De Roo said his decision was reached "in consultation with the representatives of Catholic teaching bodies, the Diocesan Lay Advisory Committee on Education, the clergy and religious."

"These discussions took place after reports of a detailed study of the buildings had been given by architects and engineers," the bishop said. Detailed negotiations continue including the exact price.

RENOVATIONS

It is expected that at least $150,000 would go into renovations to make the buildings suitable for school and dormitory use. It was thought the schools might serve the entire lower Vancouver Island area.

Greenhouses, army huts and other temporary buildings along Argyle Street are included in the deal.

GARDENS STAY

Terraced gardens fronting the 50-year-old Young building are expected to remain intact, a garden gem of Greater Victoria.

Room for playing fields could be made on the existing parking lot between gardens and Dunlop House, or off Argyle Street when the huts are removed.

The university will remain in the buildings as long as necessary to effect a move to Gordon Head.

Mr. Elworthy and Uvic president Dr. Malcolm Taylor said the sale "allows us to proceed with the orderly development of Gordon Head campus."

PUBLIC MEETING

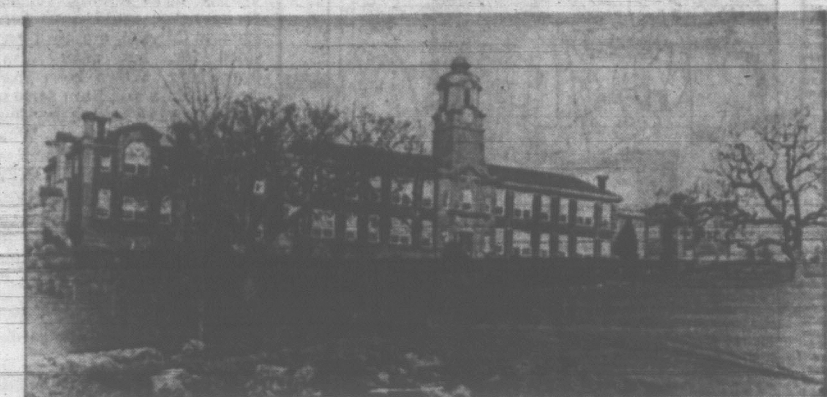

The development board chairman said further plans would be unveiled next week with a public meeting on disposal of 35 undeveloped acres at Lansdowne, including Dunlop House and grounds.

Oak Bay council, given a preview late Monday after an "enthusiastic" meeting of development board and the university board of governors, seemed agreeable to proposals, development manager Floyd Fairclough said.

The plan is a modification of an earlier scheme to sell the land for apartment development. Before the land is rezoned, there would be another public hearing, May 4 at the earliest.

Wednesday Meetings

Victoria (Chinatown) Lions: 6:30 p.m., Lee's; Easter Seal campaign work party.

Once a hospital, Uvic's Young Building becomes Catholic school soon.

ALBERNI AID ROLLING

City Gives $25,000

City council today decided to send $25,000 immediately to the Alberni Valley disaster fund, swelling Vancouver Island civic grants to $43,000.

Unanimous decision, made at an informal council meeting to be ratified Thursday, also promised a review when the situation has clarified to see if more civic money should be voted.

The $25,000 grant represents a contribution of 50 cents per capita and will be made in addition to voluntary contributions being received at City Hall, which totalled $729.58 this morning.

Several aldermen indicated Victoria should set an objective of $50,000—including civic and voluntary contributions—but formal action on this was delayed pending a federal government report on damage assessment and what share it will bear.

TAG DAY

Aldermen gave the IODE permission to hold a tag day on city streets in aid of the disaster fund. It likely will be held Saturday, April 18. Ald. Robert Baird was appointed chairman of a committee to coordinate the campaign for voluntary donations.

Meanwhile, an island-wide effort to rally to the stricken communities began picking up steam.

The communities, organized under Nanaimo Mayor Pete Maffeo, aim to lead the way for other cities and senior

Work Starts On Conveyor At Peace Dam

Work has started on the world's largest conveyor belt in B.C.'s north.

It is a $10,000,000 project to shuttle 60,000,000 cubic yards of material for the huge Peace River dam.

The four-mile conveyor system will carry all the sand, gravel and rock across rugged hills to the site of the dam at Portage Mountain.

The materials will be bulldozed out of a glacial moraine. The intricate conveyor and processing system will be in operation this summer, when there will be 1,400 men at work on the dam.

There are 500 men on the project now.

A five-foot, five-inch belt of steel cables encased in rubber will carry the material through three processing plants which will screen and blend it to the right mixture for building the dam.

From the processing plants the material will run along another half mile of belt to Portage Mountain, where tractors will tow special wagons, each loaded with 100 tons, to the dam itself.

Mobile Crew Geared To Hunt Faulty Cars

Provincial officials hope to start a province-wide car-testing program this summer.

The plan is to send a mobile crew around the province checking mechanical safety—brakes, lights, tires and other equipment.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner announced during the legislative session that the government was considering the idea to help promote safety on the highways.

Motor Vehicles Branch officials are now working out the details and plan to make a recommendation soon.

An official said it is hoped to have the first mobile unit on the road this summer.

At present there are no mobile units and only one permanent vehicle testing station—in Vancouver.

It handles a tremendous volume of traffic, and issues windshield stickers to all approved cars.

If there is anything wrong with a car it is tagged with a rejection sticker and the driver is ordered to make repairs without in a specific time and then get another inspection.

The city-operated Vancouver tests are compulsory, but it has not yet been decided if the mobile unit's testing will be, too, or whether it will be a system of spot checks.

This would depend on how long the mobile unit could stay in each community.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Perennial Globe-Trotter!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband announced last November that he needed a rest, so he went to New York to visit his sister. After being gone two months, he sent me a post card from Paris saying he got the "urge" to go abroad. I have been getting his post cards from all over Europe with no word of how to contact him. What if I, or one of the children, should become seriously ill, or die? Our children are away at boarding school, thank heavens, so they are spared the humiliation. I feel like a fool when people ask me where my husband is. He obviously cares nothing for me or he never could have done such a thing. I am well provided for, but money isn't everything. We've been married 19 years and I am seriously considering asking my lawyer to file for a divorce. What would you do in my place?

HEARTBROKEN: I'd get in touch with my lawyer immediately and attempt to locate my globe trotting husband. He could be sick — or just sick of you. In any case, it's time he got home. Do nothing about a divorce at this distance.

DEAR ABBY: I believe that my mother-in-law is one in a million. Judging from most of your letters about mothers-in-law, I am lucky. We get along wonderfully and even think and do things alike. When I wanted to dry out a cowhide, she helped me take it up and nail it to my garage roof, salt it down and trim it off. Now I ask you, how many mothers-in-law would go through that for a daughter-in-law? Sincerely, MRS. C. G. NORTH FORT MYERS, FLORIDA

DEAR MRS. C. G.: Not very danged many!

DEAR ABBY: I am 15 and my problem is my parents. I met a very nice boy who is 17. He is a sharp kid and a real neat dresser. My parents met him and decided they didn't like him because his pants were too tight. Now they won't let me go out with him for that reason. He keeps calling and asking to see me, and I keep making excuses. I can't tell him my parents are square, can I?

HIGHLAND PARK DEAR HIGHLAND: Tell the boy that your parents want you to see more of more boys and less of just one. Tight pants won't be the vogue for ever.

Beauty and Convenience In Practical Table Set

By PENNY SAVER

Following a recent dinner at a friend's, my curiosity won out over my integrity and forced me to ask my hostess where she had purchased her place mats and coasters.

And, because she finds them so practical for her own use she insisted that I let my readers in on the "scoop."

These beautiful sets are made of 100 per cent jute and come in a wide assortment of colors, including black. The mats are available in either round or oval shapes and price is $1.75.

These stain resistant mats have a non-skid foam latex backing, are color-fast, machine washable and require no ironing.

Matching coasters are priced at $3.25 for a set of eight, also made of jute. There are eight different colors in each set and coasters are chemically treated and absorbent. They are available only in round shape with scalloped edges.

Not only practical for every day use, but also enhancing, sets are suitable for ordinary family meals or informal dinners.

Here's a gadget for the man of the house (or the woman if hubby leaves the gardening to her). It's a lawn sprinkler which delivers a fine soaking spray without damaging grass seedlings.

Sprinkler regularly sells for 69 cents but has now been reduced to 49 cents. It fits any standard garden hose, is made of durable plastic and has no loose parts. Its soil-soaking, non-eroding spray covers up to 800 square feet. Sprinkler is made of weatherproof material and has a plated spike.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

It is true that lots of room is needed to do many of the best exercises. You do not realize this when you see them done on a gym floor or in an exercise room of some salon, but when you begin trying them out for size in your own bedroom or living room it is often a different matter.

You may find yourself under the piano or crack an ankle against a chair.

Many a man, after leaving for work, has rushed back for something he forgot to find the living room looking unfamiliar. The furniture may be pushed back against the walls and in the midst of all this confusion his little lady may be doing her figure-molding exercises.

I know this to be true because even though I have a fairly large living room I have heaved a few pieces of furniture around. In a small apartment it would be impossible to find the space for some of the splendid motions for beauty. However, there are other exercises which can be done easily in small quarters, not on a dime, but almost.

For instance, this is one of the best for tricking the inches on your waist-measurement. You could almost do it in a telephone booth. Stand with your feet comfortably separated. Bend forward, dragging the fingertips of both hands down your left leg. Go as far as you can without bending your knees. Drag your fingertips up your left leg as you straighten your trunk completely. Continue.

After a while drag your fingertips down your right leg and drag them back up your leg. If you can only go as far as mid-way between your knee and ankle at first, that's good for a starter. Later on you will reach your ankle and maybe your toe.

I have a leaflet which gives you nine exercises which can be done in a small space. If you would like to have it send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet number 30 to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Alaskans Make Do at Diamond Jim's

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes. The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 30-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Nancy Minihane, age 11, of So. Portland, Me., for her question:

What are the habits of the lemming?

Most of us know only fact about the furry little lemming. He ends his life by committing suicide—or so we are told. But before this tragic event, he leads a busy and interesting life. His normal habits lead him to take that fatal, fatal dip in the ocean. The pretty little creature really does not plan to end his life.

Lemmings are mousey voles that make their homes in the chilly climates of several northern countries. The lemming of Scandinavia is about five inches long, plus an inch of stubby tail. His thick, silken coat is mainly golden brown. He may wear dark stripes down his back, or a glossy dark collar around his neck. His long coat hides his little round ears and his tiny feet are padded with fur.

The snow lemming lives in the Arctic regions of Canada and Siberia. In the fall, he changes his brown summer coat to winter white. The brown lemming of the Hudson Bay region wears dark brown all year. All these different lemmings feed on grass and low-growing plant food of the far north. They thrive in countless numbers, providing food for the Arctic foxes and other meat eaters.

The furry little creatures are busy foraging for food day and night. They never stray far from their shallow burrows.

When alarmed, one or two of the bolder lemmings rise up on their back legs and utter squeaks and grunts to warn their more timid friends and relatives. When winter comes, the hungry creatures carry on their busy lives under the snow—they never have time to hibernate.

With spring comes the nesting season when parent lemmings build their round nests of grass and line them with soft hair. There may be five or six or even 11 youngsters in the family and often there are several litters during the summer. Lemmings multiply at a great rate and from time to time vast hordes of them leave home, perhaps with the idea of migrating to other places where there is more food.

Armies of the furry creatures cross hills and valleys, streams and rivers. At last they reach the shore and without pausing a moment thousands and thousands of them plunge into the chilly water and perish.

These strange migrations begin whenever the lemming population in an area builds up to vast numbers. They may occur after four or five years or not for 20 years. No one can explain why hordes of the furry voles end their lives in the sea. But only a few escape. These lucky fellows start a new cycle of lemming population which grows and grows until time comes for another migration.

Money and other contributions have poured in from around the world. Portland lumbermen donated a shipload of lumber and longshoremen offered to load it without pay. The Japanese government and Pope Paul each sent $10,000. The Methodist Council of Bishops declared April 5 Alaska earthquake appeal Sunday.

American Red Cross and Salvation Army spokesmen said further shipments of food and clothing right now will only cause transportation, storage and handling problems. Instead, Alaskans need cash with which to repair, rebuild and refurbish their homes and buy food and clothing, they said.

No one has estimated how many were left homeless. The Red Cross says preliminary surveys indicate nearly 10,000 persons lost at least household items. The agency says the disaster destroyed an estimated 300 or more homes, did major damage to 380 others and minor damage to 580.

In Washington Monday, Governor William Egan estimated damage to his state amounted to at least $750,000,000.

Air force and navy planes carried 350 tons of cargo—from diapers to electric generators and water purifiers—to the disaster area 2,500 miles from Seattle.

The Salvation Army has provided large-scale services, finding immediate housing for more than 500 families, offering food for 650 families, serving 100,000 meals from a mobile canteen, giving clothing to 200 families and locating missing persons.

The biggest problems of all—finding jobs for the jobless and permanent homes for the homeless—are ahead.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Thirty-five refugees from the village of Portage, are staying in a log lodge called Diamond Jim's.

An Anchorage grade school is home for 266 Indians from Kodiak Island.

Thirty - ... villagers from Chena are living in a church at Cordova.

These are examples of how Alaskan and relief agencies are caring for those left homeless by the earthquake and tidal waves of March 27.

Disaster workers call it one of the most unusual and difficult relief operations of recent U.S. history. Faced with poor communications and great distances, relief forces have relied on helicopters, planes, trucks, autos and foot travel to bring aid.

PET POINTS

By Dr. J. R. Emas

Is It True That War Dogs Can't Be Pacified?

No. It takes training, of course, by qualified experts, but war dogs can be "civilianized." Many of the K-9 dogs of the past war were pacified and returned to their homes.

CLINIC: Q. "Is it possible to teach cats discipline as you do with dogs?"

G. Mc., Scranton, Pa. A. No. Cats are much more individualistic and do not respond to discipline as dogs do. They can be taught to do—or not to do—certain things, but they do not obey commands as dogs will.

CLINIC: Q. "Do people really take dog registration seriously, or is this matter of getting papers for pure-breds a thing of the past?"

Miss B.A.F., Kansas C., Kans. A. The American Kennel Club, which devotes most of its activities to registering pure-bred dogs, last year registered more than a half-million individual animals. I believe this volume speaks for itself.

CLINIC: Q. "Should I add salt to my dog's food? Human's require salt, don't dogs?"

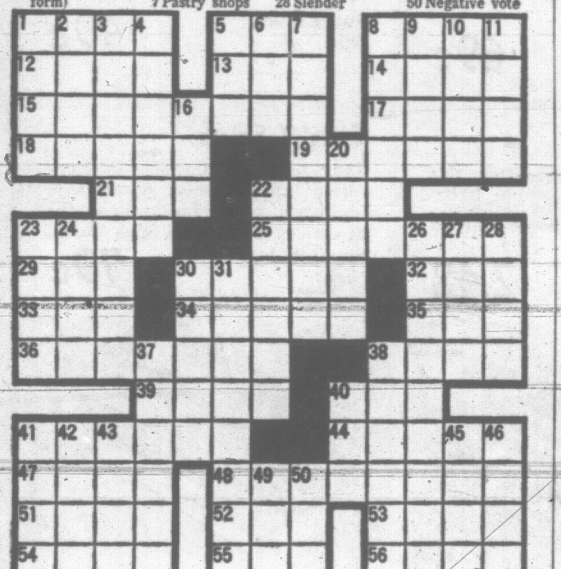

D.S.E., Boise, Idaho. A. Salt is included in commercial dog foods, so there's no need to add. If you feel table meat to your pet, you can add a pinch of salt.

ALL-PURPOSE BELT

A Yemeni man's belt is his status symbol, serving as pocket and briefcase, lunch box, key ring, cosmetic kit and dagger holder.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK — You've heard the wonderfully happy stories about the vaudeville guys who finally played the Palace...

Well, the TV and movie star Don Knotts never made it to the Palace... fact is, he got fired from the Jefferson Theatre on 14th Street.

"When I see those movies where Phil Silvers says, 'We're gonna play the Palace, Baby!' I suffer," Don said with a wince as we sat reminiscing in Lindy's.

"Because after I played the Jefferson my agent called and said 'Baby! You're cancelled.'"

"He said, 'Baby!' again and then he said, 'You need new material.'"

"I told him my stuff had gone over real good in Brooklyn and West Virginia," Don remembered. "Shuddering slightly, he went on."

HE WAS DIFFERENT

"I was different, that was my trouble. When I came out the orchestra leader said, 'Where's your music?' I told him I didn't have any. He said, 'Then give me some 8x10's to put on the music racks.' I told him I didn't have any pictures. He said 'What kind of an act is this?'

"Then the manager came up—I was about 9th on a bill of 14, and there was also a movie—and he said, 'Eight minutes and no more!' Was I embarrassed? I only had 4 minutes.

"But it was sharp. Like this drunk bumps into a guy carrying a grandfather's clock. The guy says 'Why don't you watch where you're walking?' The drunk says, 'Why don't you wear a wristwatch like everybody else?'

"A guy up in the balcony laughed... all alone, he laughed. I said, 'Thanks, Dad.' That was my best joke."

After that disaster, Don quit trying to be a Milton Berle or Bob Hope and went back to Morgantown, W.Va., his home town. At a banquet he saw a very nervous speaker who trembled so much that when he tried to take a drink of water, he cleared his throat, he spilled it on himself.

"I tried that character. I've been doing it ever since."

Don, starred in the movie, "The Incredible Mr. Limpet," in which he plays a fish, thanks Steve Allen and Andy Griffith for bringing him along—but he thinks Hollywood producer Jack Warner's the best vaudevillian today.

"Hollywood gave Warner a banquet because he'd given a bus to a charity," Knotts said. "He got up and said, 'Twelve guys wrote me a speech but I can't even read it so I'm gonna deliver it. What's the fuss about me buying a bus? It didn't cost me anything. It's deductible. I'll buy you 12 buses... make that 21!'

Don shook his head sadly. "If I'd had material like that, I could have played the Palace, Baby!"

THE MIDNIGHT EARL... Abbe Lane'll be snapped up by Hollywood to become a new Marilyn Monroe-type Sex Symbol (who can sing beautifully in several languages and wiggle in even more) after her bust-up with Xavier Cugat becomes positive. Cugat, who last heard from her March 22 when she gave him a kiss on the telephone, is reduced to writing her letters to find out her plans which seem to be that she's seeing lawyers about going single-o in every way. Both she and Cugat are loaded. Cogie's still got old money and Abbe's got a new Rolls and new jewels.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: The Broadwayite's idea of a real out-door man is a guy who watches TV on his terrace.

WISH I'D SAID THAT: A husband is just a sweetheart who pushed his luck too far.

EARL'S PEARLS: A small town is where folks talk about you if you don't do anything—and gossip about you if you do something.—Harold Coffin, S.F. Examiner.

Stan Freeman tells of the Peace Corps girl returning from Africa with a voodoo charm and a ring through her nose. Her mother cried, "No, no—I told you to marry a rich doctor!" That's earl, brother.

SIU PACT HIT

'Hoodlum Empire Remains'

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's marine union trustees have been accused of allowing hoodlums to remain in the Seafarers' International Union of Canada.

The charge was made Monday in the Commons and in the labor movement in the wake of Friday's agreement between the trustees and Paul Hall, North American SIU president, aimed at ending labor troubles on the Great Lakes.

The so-called "peace pact" provides that Leonard J. McLaughlin, a former New Zealand sailor, will assume the presidency of the SIU when—and if—the trustees remove their temporary appointee, Charles Turner, from the SIU's top post.

Mr. Turner, a former official of the Railway Clerks Union, was made SIU president when the trustees fired Hal C. Banks.

But Mr. McLaughlin, long-time lieutenant of Mr. Banks with the title of executive vice-president in charge of contracts and contract enforcement, was left in office by the trustees.

Outside Parliament, Elroy Robson, national vice-president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, accused the trustees of capitulation to the SIU.

"They have agreed in effect to give back to Paul Hall the absolute mastery of the Canadian 'Great Lakes,'" he said.

TOLERATE HOODLUMS

"They have chosen to tolerate hoodlums instead of rooting them out—and not only tolerate them, but work and negotiate with them, and even openly praise them."

Richard Greaves, president of the National Association of Marine Engineers, said the agreement will perpetuate the "hoodlum empire" of the SIU after Mr. McLaughlin.

By a special act of Parliament, the trustees—Mr. Justice Victor L. Dryer, Judge Rene Lippe and Charles H. Millard—have full authority to manage and control the SIU, the Canadian Maritime Union, the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, the National Association of Marine Engineers and the marine section of the CBRT.

In the Commons, Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said Mr. McLaughlin was portrayed by Mr. Justice T. G. Norris in his report on the labor dispute as a "clever, resourceful and entirely untruthful witness," a subversive supporter of Mr. Banks in the SIU.

"I am just wondering if McLaughlin has gone through some political dry cleaning," he said.

Prime Minister Pearson accused Mr. Diefenbaker of not wanting the Great Lakes dispute settled.

"If we are to get a settlement by securing the help of a hoodlum like that, I wonder whether or not the cost is too high," snapped Mr. Diefenbaker.

Deputy Minister MacEachen maintained the trustees have not promoted Mr. McLaughlin to the SIU presidency.

TEST ARRANGEMENTS

"There will be no immediate change in the present leadership of the SIU of Canada until the shipping season is further advanced," he said. "This period of time will provide an opportunity to ensure that the arrangements have been fully honored before any change is made."

He contended that the trustees will not appoint Mr. McLaughlin as SIU president, but "will allow the provision of the constitution with respect to the succession of leadership to be put into effect."

Even when Mr. Turner steps down as acting SIU president, he will continue to supervise the over-all administration of the union.

Mr. MacEachen said the agreement contemplates an end to harassment of Canadian shipping in U.S. lake ports and continued supervision by the trustees over the SIU.

New Democrat Leader Douglas asked whether the appointment of Mr. McLaughlin was achieving the intent of Parliament in establishing the three-man trusteeship last October—the "desire of Parliament to free the shipping industry from the rule of thugs and to destroy the hoodlum empire which had victimized and terrorized the seafaring industry for too long a period of time."

Again Mr. MacEachen insisted that the trustees are not appointing Mr. McLaughlin, but merely allowing the SIU constitution to function.

Victoria operating engineers will be represented at the international union convention in San Francisco next week by business agent (local 918) Ed Callan.

Mr. Callan leaves Saturday for the week-long convention; the fourth he has attended.

Cliff Parker (local 115) also will attend.

'Contract Out' Pension Plan Under Attack

OTTAWA (CP)—Opposition Leader Diefenbaker has accused the minority Liberal government of leading Canada towards "the piecemeal dismemberment of the basic principles of Confederation."

New Democratic Party Leader Douglas says government plans could lead to "Balkanization" of Canada.

Their attacks came Monday during an impromptu 30-minute Commons debate on last week's federal-provincial conference at Quebec City.

Opposition fire centred on the involved situation surrounding the Canada Pension Plan and on government plans to permit provinces to "contract out" of federal-provincial shared-cost programs such as hospital insurance and welfare programs.

The Quebec government of Premier Lesage is the only provincial government which has said it wants to contract out of shared-cost programs, taking on the full cost burden in return for added taxing powers to carry them.

Similarly, Quebec is the only province to have announced plans for its own retirement pension plan, which will mean the federal pension plan won't apply there.

SAID MEETING FAILED

Mr. Diefenbaker, following a 40-minute report on the Quebec conference by Prime Minister Pearson, termed the meeting "an abject failure."

He said the government's plans for contracting out of shared-cost programs "will mean in time the de-Confederation of our nation."

"That is where the diplomatic dawdling of one year on the part of this government has brought this nation."

Mr. Diefenbaker said the conference posed a challenge to the whole concept of "whether we are to have a united Canada."

Mr. Douglas said the smaller provinces couldn't hope to finance such programs as hospital insurance with the same taxing powers which would be transferred to larger provinces opting out of the program.

"Don't lose sight of the smaller provinces in your desire to appease the very legitimate aspirations of the two larger provinces," Mr. Douglas urged the government.

THREATENS SECESSION

Creditite Leader Gilles Grégoire said a "complete and total" secession of Quebec would take place unless English-speaking Canadians accept a two-nation constitution soon.

Mr. Pearson told the Commons his government's proposed Canada Pension Plan still could operate if "other big provinces" followed Quebec's lead in establishing a provincial pension plan.

He was obviously referring to the suggestion by Premier Roberts that Ontario might adopt a plan similar to Quebec's.

Mr. Pearson said the government intended to go ahead with the present Canada Pension Plan legislation before the commons.

Even with a series of provincial plans, the prime minister said, "the purpose of our initiative in the federal government would be achieved if there was basic pension coverage of a portable nature available to all Canadians."

Social Credit Leader Thompson said the government should move carefully in the pension field to avoid defeating its own purpose of achieving a national system of portable pensions.

LOCAL BRIEFS

City Hall heard a familiar refrain Monday—complaints of noise from the Oak Bay Avenue A & W Root Beer Drive-In.

Several city council and committee meetings struggled with trying to satisfy similar complaints in the past two years.

Evidence they weren't successful came in a letter this morning from Mrs. L. Savory, 1887 Oak Bay Avenue, who said there was noise until two or three o'clock every morning.

"You just nicely get quiet for sleep and some fool tears out on two wheels or someone blows a horn for service," she wrote.

Winners of the special bi-monthly bridge game played Friday at the Moose Hall were: North-South, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Smith, Velma Acres and James Duprau; George Morgan and William Browne and Ethel Cleworth and Hilda Price; East-West, Ida Druce and Leslie Isaacson; Phil Hagel and Eric Goodwin; Richard Lipsey and William McConnell and Marianne Powell and John Bishop.

At the duplicate bridge tournament held Saturday winners were: James Duprau and Eric Goodwin; Leslie Stewart and Gordon Creighton; Otto Leeselement and Jack Betson; Joseph Waddington and Patricia Bishop; Phil Hagel and Tony Marah and Mr. and Mrs. Earle Dye.

St. Alban's 50-up club will meet Thursday at 2 p.m. in the parish hall, 1468 Ryan Street.

ETNA VILLAGERS PANIC WHEN VOLCANO ERUPTS

CATANIA, Sicily (UPI)—A series of violent explosions rocked the Etna volcano today, sending a thick column of white and black smoke thousands of feet into the sky.

The blasts and smoke touched off panic in mountain-side communities on this Mediterranean island off the foot of Italy.

There was no immediate indication of a flow of lava accompanying the explosions.

Bulldozer Kills Minister In Civil Rights Protest

Tragedy At Site Of School

CLEVELAND (AP)—A white minister, demonstrating with civil rights group, threw himself under a self-unloader tractor at a school construction site today and was crushed by the treads of the big earth-moving machine.

Police said the man, whose chest was crushed, was dead when he reached Lakeside Hospital. They identified him as Rev. Bruce W. Klunder, Baker, Ore., who joined the staff of the Student Christian Union in the fall of 1961.

After the accident picketing stopped and so did movement of trucks and heavy equipment, but some shovelling continued.

The driver of the tractor, identified by police as John White, 33, Mentor, Ohio, said his attention was distracted by demonstrators at the site.

CROWD OF 200
A crowd of about 200 had gathered at the site of a new elementary school at Lakeview Road and Saywell Avenue on the east side about 12:30 p.m. to protest start of construction.

The protesting groups claim building a new school on this site will perpetuate what they describe as "de facto" school segregation in that area.

Less than an hour before the man was killed, police hauled away four men who had thrown themselves in front of the wheels of a cement truck. Some cans and bottles were thrown during this demonstration which occurred outside of the school site.

Monday, when the first demonstration took place, 21 demonstrators were arrested.

ROUGHED UP DRIVER
Police said that just before White's tractor, a front-end loader, crushed the man, several of the demonstrators had jumped on the moving vehicle and roughed White up.

As word of the accident spread through the shocked crowd, the demonstrators quieted down considerably. A hurried call went in for additional police to augment a contingent of more than 30 who were on hand when 22 sign-carrying pickets began their march.

Fourteen helmeted mounted police had opened a path for four cement trucks to enter the site before the first flareup occurred. When the fifth truck tried to go in, four men from the crowd of spectators threw themselves in front of its wheels and were carried away by police to one of several waiting paddy wagons.

SPACE STATION MUST GO ZANZIBAR INFORMS U.S.

ZANZIBAR (Reuters)—President Abeid Karume today told American charge d'affaires Frank Carlucci that the American Project Mercury station must be removed from the island before the end of the month.

Karume said the movement must be made in the interests of the defence and security of Zanzibar.

He told Carlucci the action was the result of a statement made by American ambassador to Kenya, William Attwood, while in New York, which was clearly designed to bring about conflict between Zanzibar and the rest of East Africa.

Attwood told a press conference in New York last Thursday that China and East Germany were trying to turn Zanzibar "into a kind of non-African state to be used as a staging base for political manoeuvres" on the continent.

The Mercury tracking station in Zanzibar was established in 1960 as one of a series across the globe to assist in tracking the projected manned orbit of the earth.

Steel Giants Indicted On Price Fix

NEW YORK (UPI)—A federal grand jury today indicted eight major steel companies and two officials on charges of conspiring to fix prices by eliminating competition in the $3.6 billion carbon steel sheet industry.

The indictment was the result of an investigation started two years ago after the late president John F. Kennedy forced the steel industry to rescind a $6-a-ton price increase. It was the biggest anti-trust action since 29 large electrical companies were indicted on price-fixing charges in 1959, resulting in the sentencing of seven officials in 1961.

Pleading was set for April 21.

The indictment charged that meetings were held at the Biltmore and Sheraton hotels in New York to establish and carry out the price-fixing agreements.

Named were: United States Steel and James P. Barton, its assistant general manager; Bethlehem Steel and W. J. Stephens, its former assistant vice-president who now is president of Jones and Laughlin Steel; National Steel, Great Lakes Steel, Jones and Laughlin, Armco Steel, Republic Steel and Wheeling Steel.

Three other companies were named as co-conspirators but were not indicted. They are Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co., Pittsburgh Steel Co. and Granite City Steel Co.

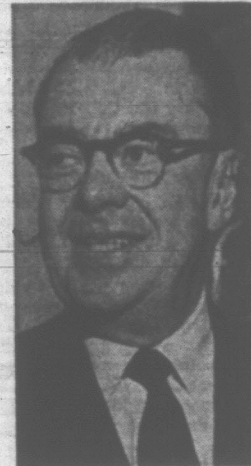

The indictment did not accuse the companies of fixing basic prices of sheet steel. It said only that they agreed on charges for so-called "extras" included in the price paid for specific orders.

These extra charges are for sheets of particular dimensions, gauge, quality, metallurgical content or processing requirements.

FORCED SHOWDOWN

The industry's attempt to raise the basic price of steel in the first week of April, 1962, brought about a showdown between Kennedy and U.S. steel board chairman Roger Blough.

Blough announced after a Kennedy blast at U.S. Steel and

PAUL MARTIN
... $100 million more

Columbia Payment Greater

By ALEX YOUNG
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—External Affairs Minister Paul Martin today said Canada will get $100 million more for Columbia River development than the U.S. was prepared to pay 16 months ago.

He disclosed that the Americans made an offer to Canada in December, 1962, which came to about 3.75 mills per kilowatt hour for downstream power resulting from Canadian development of the international river.

The price settled on in the Canada-U.S. Columbia Treaty and its adjustments (4.4 mills for the power, or 5.3 mills if flood control benefits are added), was worth $100 million more to Canada, he said.

Mr. Martin made the statements in testimony before the Commons' external affairs committee. He appeared as the first witness as the committee began what is expected to be a lengthy and exhaustive inquiry into the treaty.

In launching the inquiry, committee chairman John Matheson (Liberal—Leeds) announced that David Fulton, justice minister in the former Conservative government and the man who negotiated the original treaty, would be invited to testify. Mr. Fulton is now B.C. leader of the Conservative party.

OTHER WITNESSES

Others to be invited to appear are: B.C. Attorney-General Robert Bonner, B.C. Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston, B.C. Hydro co-chairman Hugh Keenleyside, representatives of the Alberta and Saskatchewan governments—on the question of proposed Columbia diversion to the prairies, and four engineering firms which have done Columbia work.

In arguing in favor of the Canada-U.S. deal, Mr. Martin attacked those who claimed the treaty was a "sell-out." They were using a general term to hide any intelligent examination of what the treaty was designed to do, he said.

If the treaty was a sell-out by Canada, he said, it was just as accurate to say it was a sell-out by the U.S., because Canada derived benefits from it, too.

Mr. Martin predicted that the Columbia development, combined with the B.C. government's own Peace River power project, would "usher in a program of development and industrialization that will have the greatest beneficial consequences for B.C. particularly, and for Canada as a whole."

It was an undertaking that would take its place alongside

CNR Sets New Volume Mark

OTTAWA (CP)—The publicly owned Canadian National Railways did more business in 1963 than ever before, achieving a record $800,000,000 in gross revenues on its railway, highway, hotel and telecommunications operations, CNR President Donald Gordon informed the Commons today.

In his annual report, tabled in the Commons by Transport Minister Pickersgill, Mr. Gordon said the CNR had a net income of $21,190,774 on its 1963 operations but debt charges pushed it into the hole.

MOTORISTS VICTIMS ON LAKE MARACAIBO

(Times News Service)

MARACAIBO — Radio reports today said at least 20 persons were feared dead or missing after an oil tanker struck and destroyed an entire section of the new $75,000,000 bridge across Lake Maracaibo in Venezuela Monday night.

The reports said the tanker Esso Maracaibo collided with the bridge.

Reports from the scene said an unknown number of cars fell into the water and at least 20 persons were feared dead or missing.

Preliminary estimates of damage to the bridge exceeded $2,000,000.

Soldiers, police and volunteers were searching the lake waters for survivors.

None of the 36,000-ton tanker's all-Venezuelan crew was hurt, although great chunks of concrete from the overpass fell on the vessel's bow causing it to list heavily.

The tanker struck a bridge piling near Punta Iguala on the east end of the 5½-mile bridge, Latin America's largest, as it was heading out of the lake.

The Esso Maracaibo is owned by the Creole Petroleum Company, a subsidiary of Standard Oil of New Jersey, chief American developer of Venezuela's oil industry on the eastern shore of Lake Maracaibo.

MORTONVASAR (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev told Hungarian agricultural experts today not to boast about their achievements but to adopt some American farming methods.

The Soviet leader, on the eighth day of an official visit to Hungary, told the experts they should, for example, grow sweet corn as the Americans do.

"... They the Americans do it better and they grow much more than we Russians do," Khrushchev said.

"They can it and make good meals out of it. Let us do the same and let us produce more sweet corn for human consumption and not only for fodder."

'BARBARIC AND PAGAN'

British Minister Attacks Modern Funeral Customs

NOTTINGHAM (Reuters)—Rev. Robert Duce, well-known British television broadcaster on religion, today attacked in his parish magazine Britain's "barbaric and pagan" funeral customs.

The Congregationalist minister condemned black cars, top hats, ornate coffins and "quite senseless" embalming.

"The way we perpetuate and linger over all the various stages of the burial ritual is primitive and quite unnecessary. Even the sending of flowers has become a mockery because they remain contained in cellophane packets—entombed in fact," he added.

Little Sentry, Tiny Tattler Hard at Work

VANCOUVER (CP)—A retired RCMP sergeant said today wiretapping equipment is extensively used by RCMP and Vancouver police and by private detectives and individuals in divorce cases and in business and industry.

Ernest Nuttall, 63, whose testimony helped acquit John Wasylenchuk of Burnaby, B.C., of second-degree murder charges in Seattle last week, said his own telephone was tapped.

"People have no idea of the extent of wire-tapping today," he said in an interview. "They would be amazed."

Nuttall said: Police secretly have telephone company officials make records of phone conversations; Tiny microphone trans-

mitters—some bearing such names as "Little Sentry" and "Tiny Tattler"—are used to bug hotel rooms;

Induction coils put on or under telephones permit conversations to be recorded;

Spies eavesdrop on people at home by running wires off the house telephone lines. A Vancouver newspaper says most of the 11 private investigators listed in the Vancouver directory are equipped to do wiretapping jobs. It says some even advertise "finest electronic equipment," "photo recording and electronic recording equipment" or "secret recordings for evidence."

Nuttall said Canada lacks adequate legislation restricting wiretapping.

He said he was "thunderstruck" to discover when giving a deposition that was used in the Wasylenchuk trial that his telephone had been tapped in the 1950s when he was being investigated by the RCMP at the request of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

He said he was also convinced that his telephone was tapped in the last month.

He said he was always against the use of the equipment. The RCMP had used it mostly on drug and security cases. RCMP and city police forces had men who spent most of their time on wiretapping. Occasionally they would ask a private firm to do some of the work.

One investigator said it is common for businessmen who suspect pilfering on the part of employees to bug the premises. The employees' homes may even be bugged.

The man was also quoted as saying he knows of cases elsewhere in Canada where one manufacturer spies on another to find out about new products.

If they do away with th' Senate there won't be as much Canada fer Quebec t' break away from.

Belgian Strike Protests Mount

(Times News Service)
BRUSSELS—A warrant for the arrest of two doctors in north Belgium was issued today following the death of a 15-month-old baby during the doctor's strike which is a week old with no solution in sight.

Thousands of workers marched through the streets today in protest against the walk-out and the Belgian Communist party called for a 24-hour general strike with "massive demonstrations" in principal towns.

The two doctors, who were provisionally detained Monday, were charged with "non-assistance to a person in danger of death."

A court will decide Thursday whether the warrant should be maintained or dropped.

The two were in charge of an emergency clinic where the boy was taken.

Dr. Andre Wynen, one of the leaders of the strike which was joined by nearly all of the country's 12,000 doctors, told a press conference Monday that there was a six-hour delay in treatment for the little boy, Eric Moons, the youngest of five children.

But the delay was due to the fact the family doctor who was called to see him was sick himself, Wynen said.

The sick doctor referred the child to the emergency service clinic set up by the strikers to deal with severe illnesses, Wynen added.

"But the child's case was previously classified as 'non-urgent' and this caused the delay," he said.

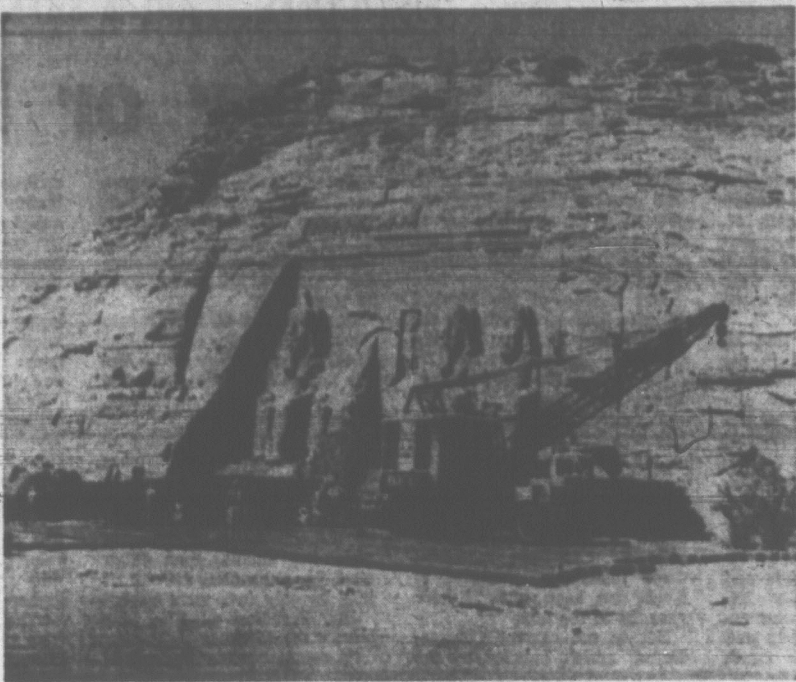

Nevertheless, the child was taken to hospital and received the treatment he needed, he said. His death was due to "the normal course of the illness," he explained.

Wynen's account of the incident differed from earlier reports which said the child's father had originally called his own family doctor to treat the boy for an attack of bronchitis. But since the doctor was out on strike he called the emergency service at Herentals, about 10 miles from the family's home.

The two doctors in charge of the emergency service arrived and took the baby to the clinic where he died Sunday morning.

VANGUARD of 3,000-man force begins job of cutting 32-century-old Temples of Abu Simbel including statues of King Ramses II, Queen Nefertari and other Egyptian gods into 30-ton blocks for removal to new site. (AP Wirephoto.)

$36 MILLION PROJECT ON MILE TEMPLES DISMEMBERED

ABU SIMBEL, Egypt (AP)—The towering temples of Abu Simbel, untroubled for 32 centuries, look down with majestic disdain today on a group of men preparing to cut them into pieces.

The men belong to a five-country construction team with the task of dismembering the ancient monuments and restoring them on high ground—out of reach of waters to be dammed up by Egypt's new Aswan Dam.

With electronically guided saws, the archeological surgeons plan to cut King Ramses II, his queen, Nefertiti, and an assortment of Egyptian gods into 30-ton blocks.

A cofferdam, 1,200 feet long and 111 feet high, will keep back the rising Nile waters as work continues.

WORK THREE SHIFTS
The engineers are working in three shifts. The project will require 3,000 workers when it gets into full swing in about two weeks. Already 2,000 men are on the spot.

Before the statues and stones are cut up, the twin temples will be covered with sand and timber for protection. Then the rock mountain above them is to be cut and moved away.

When the temples get their new home on the banks of a huge new lake, they will be near a tourist hotel, a small port, a hospital, a swimming pool, museum and, of course, a tourist bazaar where you can purchase models of the temples, made in Cairo.

Saving Abu Simbel is a UNESCO project and 47 countries agreed to put up most of the $36,000,000 needed.

Experiment Removes Isotope From Blood

MOSCOW (AP)—Ordinarily fatal doses of the radioactive isotope Strontium-90, have been removed from the blood of experimental dogs by a Soviet researcher.

Reporting the experiments of Mikhail Petrovnik at the Institute of Biophysics, the Soviet news agency Tass says an artificial kidney and quick action were necessary to prevent the dogs' deaths.

Strontium-90 is a long-lasting isotope created by nuclear weapons' explosions. In mild doses that are not fatal it can be transmitted from the milk of cows that eat exposed grass and in other ways.

Petrovnik injected lethal doses into the blood of three dogs, Tass said.

Five minutes later he began removing Strontium-90 from one dog by passing its blood through an artificial kidney built around cellophane plaques. One-third of the isotope was eliminated in 4½ hours, enabling the dog to survive.

Similar treatment of a second dog began a little later and continued for six hours, reducing the radiation effect more than in the first dog. The third dog was left untreated and died from radiation disease within a few days.

Petrovnik was quoted as saying the artificial kidney must be used quickly, before strontium injected into the blood has had time to scatter among cells of the entire organism.

Red Cosmosnauts Training For New Travels in Space

MOSCOW (AP)—Yuri Gagarin said today he and other Soviet cosmonauts are training for new voyages into space.

At the same time the news agency Tass announced Soviet scientists have made important experiments with a new type of air for space ships to permit cosmonauts to endure the stresses of flights beyond "the earth's atmosphere."

The twin announcements indicated the Russians are preparing for some new space spectacular, possibly soon.

Gagarin declined to say when the next space flight might occur or who would be going.

"When we will go, and who will go—that we do not know," said Gagarin with a grin. "We will wait and see."

Also present at the press conference where all Soviet cosmonauts who have journeyed into space—except Mrs. Valentina Nikolayevna—Tereshkova, the first woman cosmonaut. She is expecting a baby.

PLAN ANNIVERSARY
The press conference was called in connection with the "day of the cosmonauts"—April 12—the third anniversary of the historic flight of Gagarin, the first man to orbit the earth.

Soviet space scientists also were on hand but they were mum.

Tass released the news about the experiments with synthetic air in pressurized cabins.

Tass said that nitrogen was taken out of the air and replaced by helium. Normally, nitrogen constitutes 78 per cent of the air a person breathes.

Soviet scientists used a helium-oxygen mixture because this will enable future, space men "better (to) endure pressure fluctuations and higher temperatures in a space ship cabin."

The new mixture has been tested, Tass said, on men who remained in pressure cabins for periods of 10 to 25 days.

The mixture was not a complete success. Tass reported the helium produced a surprising result, namely, that "a man with a bass voice began to speak tenor."

"This is not a hazard to health, but it does create additional difficulties," Tass said. "This is why the studies will continue until the optimal variation of an artificial helium atmosphere is found."

Arthur Mayse

Once in a novel, I caused a middle-aged character to warn a pair of young ones that what they would most regret in later life wasn't the thing done but the chance passed by, the opportunity let slip.

For this reflection, quite a few readers jumped me. The sum of their protests was that I had allowed my guy to argue a doctrine which could cause no end of trouble. But they didn't change my thinking.

"Look before you leap" is wise counsel, and as one who has all too often hopped from frying pan to fire, I second it fervently. If one looks too long, though, the leap may never be made; and that can be a great pity.

One April when fortune had widened her smile to an outright grin, we took ourselves off with pockets jingling to New York.

Spring had turned Manhattan into a magic island. As a further enchantment, South Pacific—the first-run South Pacific—with Ezio Pinza and Mary Martin—had opened on Broadway.

The show was sold to the hilt, but a writer friend knew a scalper who might have a pair of tickets. He did, and he wanted forty bucks apiece for them.

We shillyeied and shall-eyed. We dithered and twitted. Finally we settled for another show, the name of which I can't for the life of me recall.

When we did get to see South Pacific—years after, Martin was no longer washing Pinza out of her hair. The wonder-musical had become just another Hollywood spectacular through which we sat glumly wishing we'd grabbed that New York scalper's pasteboards.

You see my point? By an excess of prudence, we did ourselves out of an enriching experience. That hasn't been the only time, either. We might, for instance, have started married life several years earlier if we hadn't weighed the pros and cons so all-fired thoroughly.

We were in a hollow tree

at the time, sheltering from a gale that was beating up Vancouver's Stanley Park. Outside, the wind roared and saplings crashed, but in our scooped-out cedar snag, all was homey.

I had sold a few stories to minor markets. By hard work and a touch of luck, we could make a living out of fiction. One of our up-Island friends had a cabin . . . all right, shack . . . on his place which he would let us have, along with a scrap of seafront, for nothing down and peanuts later.

We could live on trout, wild beef, love and the occasional story sale, and the depression had to end some time, didn't it?

It was a lovely prospect, and we should have scampered straight from our hollow tree to the licence bureau.

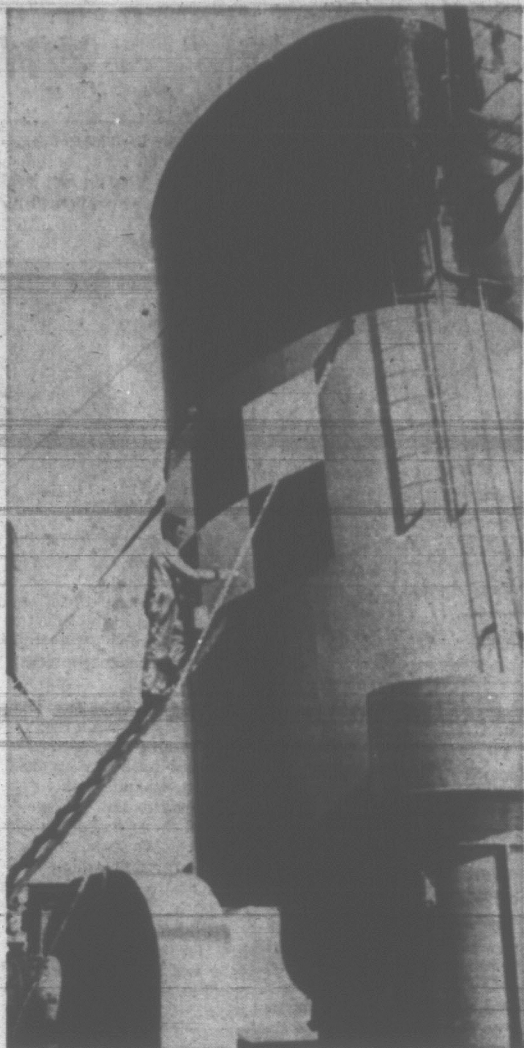

But we let a week go by, and another, and presently our brave notion was buried under a mountain of practical objections.

Sure, maybe it wouldn't have worked. That doesn't stop us from sparing a sigh whenever we pass those verdant and valuable acres . . . a few of which might have been ours, with extra years together as a bonus.

What might have been right for a couple of depression kids with all to gain and nothing to lose could well be disastrous for youngsters in today's radically different world. By no means do I advocate the blind plunge off the high board . . . after all, the pool could be empty.

Of the times when we did act in haste, the results haven't always fulfilled our hopes. There have been moves we regretted later, claims that yielded fool's gold only.

Surprisingly often, though, the decision bristled made and firmly adhered to in spite of all gloom-crying proves the right one.

FRESH PAINT IS ADDED to harbor smells as CPR cruise ship Princess Patricia gets spruced up for the Alaska run starting in May. She goes into drydock around April 27, probably in Seattle because of the shipyard strike here, to have her bottom scraped. Up there wielding the paint brush is Paul Cozens, of 1139-Chapman. RCN Unloads Gift Clothes At Hong Kong

Esquimalt-based ships have delivered to Hong Kong two tons of clothing donated by Victorians for needy Oriental children.

The 100 bags of garments were unloaded last Thursday from HMCS Fraser and Mackenzie, and turned over to the Hong Kong Junior Chamber of Commerce for distribution. It was learned here today in a dispatch from the ships.

Donated through the Save the Children Fund here and collected by the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce, the clothing was first loaded into HMCS St. Laurent.

She and the two other destroyer-escorts left Esquimalt Jan. 7 for a four-month cruise to the Orient.

The bags of clothing were unloaded in Singapore in February, and the ships went on into the Indian Ocean for participation in a Commonwealth exercise.

It ended March 17, and the St. Laurent headed west around the world.

HMCS Fraser and Mackenzie returned to Singapore en route for Victoria, and picked up the clothing for delivery to Hong Kong.

Benjamin Wong, president of Hong Kong Jaycees, and J. B. Atkinson, secretary of the Hong Kong council of social services, thanked Captain G. H. Hayes, commander of the Second Canadian Escort Squadron, for the clothing.

Arrangements for delivery had been made by Lieut. Cmdr. John Watson, executive officer HMCS Fraser, working with Mrs. W. W. McGill, head of the Save the Children Fund in Victoria.

Rom Knott Fund For Ball Park Nears $3,000

The fund for Rom Knott Memorial Park is nearing the $3,000 mark, and donations are still coming in.

A house-to-house canvass in Central Saanich raised $1,898 on the evening of April 23.

"We've had several donations since," Mrs. Stan Bickford, wife of the treasurer, said today.

It's getting pretty near the $3,000 level.

The goal is to raise $5,000 to purchase two acres of property for a ball park dedicated to the late Mr. Knott, well-known sportsman killed in a Pat Bay Highway accident, March 4.

The property adjoins Brentwood Community Hall. Donations are still being accepted by Mr. Bickford at 7011 West Saanich Road.

Des LEAVING TO MEET NEW SISTER

Three destroyer escorts are leaving Esquimalt Wednesday for two weeks of anti-submarine exercises with the U.S. Navy.

HMCS Skeena, Saskatchewan, and Margaree will go to San Diego and form a greeting party for HMCS Qu'Appelle, coming through the Panama Canal to join Pacific command.

Saskatchewan, Margaree and Qu'Appelle will arrive at Esquimalt April 24. Skeena's return date has not yet been announced.

Also going out Wednesday is submarine HMCS Grilse, starting her first phase of sea trials.

She has just undergone a complete refit, the first sub to do so in a Canadian shipyard.

Grilse was in HMC Dockyard for four months until dockside tests began early in March.

PLANNING, PLANNING, PLANNING!

There were indications today that City Hall is planning to plan its planning functions for more effective use.

Victoria branch of the Community Planning Association of Canada wrote City Hall suggesting the time has come to co-ordinate all city planning positions by amalgamating them into a single department.

It urged "the existing separated planning sections comprising the special projects department, the zoning office, the advisory planning commission, staff and other planning operations still in the engineering office be all combined directly under the city manager as a unit."

It said such a department would plan roads, zoning regulations and also issue the building permits.

City manager Dennis Young said such a move is one of several approaches he is considering in a report to be made soon to city council aimed at improving the scattered planning functions.

But he added the important point that the CPAC letter did not go far enough because planning involves financial budgeting as well as physical programs.

$1 MILLION ST. JOSEPH'S MODERNIZATION

Hospital Project Set to Start

A $1,053,000 construction project will begin this week at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Fast-start was planned by Burns and Dutton Construction Ltd. of Richmond after a meeting with hospital officials last week. The project was approved by the provincial government a week ago.

It involves construction of a new laundry building, renovation of the food service department, expansion of the emergency ward, medical records and administration areas, construction of a transformer vault for the new electrical distribution service and location of the admitting and information departments.

The project is Phase 2 in a three-stage program of modernizing and enlarging the hospital. It will take about 14 months to complete.

A separate contract for installation of a new passenger elevator, to cost $60,000, is expected to be completed in about a month.

Equipment to be installed in Phase 2 construction projects will add $476,000 to the total cost.

Uvic Buildings Sold For Catholic School

Campus Site Fetches $500,000

By AB KENT
University of Victoria
Lansdowne campus will become the site of a Roman Catholic junior-senior secondary school for boys and girls.

Purchase of the Young and Ewing buildings on 11.6 acres of land for a sum "in excess of half a million dollars" was announced jointly by university development board chairman Harold B. Elworthy and Bishop of Victoria Remi De Roo.

The sale marks the first major step in disposal of the buildings and 54 acres of land comprising Lansdowne campus in the university's plan to consolidate at Gordon Head.

Greater Victoria School Board, subject to approval of ratepayers, has decided to buy the third major structure on Lansdowne campus, the E. B. Paul building.

This will make the Roman Catholic separate school complex within a shout of the proposed school district 61 ad ministrative centre.

Bishop De Roo said his decision was reached "in consultation with the representatives of Catholic teaching bodies, the Diocesan Lay Advisory Committee on Education, the clergy and religious."

"These discussions took place after reports of a detailed study of the buildings had been given by architects and engineers," the bishop said. Detailed negotiations continue including the exact price.

It is expected that at least $500,000 would go into renovations to make the buildings suitable for school and dormitory use. It was thought the schools might serve the entire lower Vancouver Island area.

Greenhouses, army huts and other temporary buildings along Argyle Street are included in the deal.

Terraced gardens fronting the 50-year-old Young building are expected to remain intact, a garden gem of Greater Victoria.

Room for playing fields could be made on the existing parking lot between gardens and Dunlop House, or off Argyle Street when the huts are removed.

The university will remain in the buildings as long as necessary to effect a move to Gordon Head.

Mr. Elworthy and Uvic president Dr. Malcolm Taylor said the sale "allows us to proceed with the orderly development of Gordon Head campus."

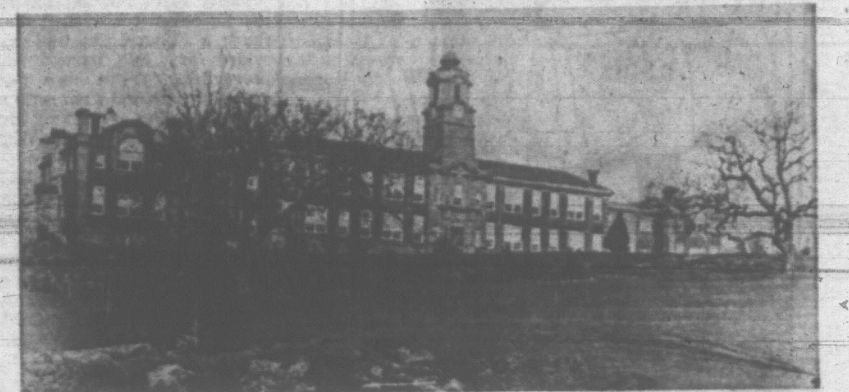

The development board chairman said further plans would be unveiled next week with a public meeting on disposal of 35 undeveloped acres at Lansdowne, including Dunlop House and grounds.

Oak Bay council, given a preview late Monday after an "enthusiastic" meeting of development board and the university board of governors, seemed agreeable to proposals, development manager Floyd Fairclough said.

The plan is a modification of an earlier scheme to sell the land for apartment development. Before the land is rezoned, there would be another public hearing, May 4 at the earliest.

Once a hospital, Uvic's Young Building becomes Catholic school soon.

ALBERNI AID ROLLING

City Gives $25,000

City council today decided to send $25,000 immediately to the Alberni Valley disaster fund, swelling Vancouver Island civic grants to $43,000.

Unanimous decision, made at an informal council meeting to be ratified Thursday, also promised a review when the situation has clarified to see if more civic money should be voted.

The $25,000 grant represents a contribution of 50 cents per capita and will be made in addition to voluntary contributions being received at City Hall, which totalled $729.58 this morning.

Several aldermen indicated Victoria should set an objective of $50,000—including civic and voluntary contributions—but formal action on this was delayed pending a federal government report on damage assessment and what share it will bear.

Other gifts are coming in steadily for the relief of flood damage, including $1,000 voted by the national executive of IODE in Toronto.

Oak Bay council approved $3,625 from municipal coffers and proposes 50 cents per capita by public subscription for a total of $17,250.

Reeve Allan Cox said senior governments could not be expected to come to the aid of the suffering cities and villages if the B.C. municipalities do not set an example.

Private donations may be where a Sunday afternoon variety show will be held.

governments to contribute to relief of $3,400,000 damage to individuals and small businesses.

Most communities plan matching grants and public subscriptions for a total $250,000 aid to the Alberni and west coast villages hit by tidal waves from the March 27 Alaska earthquake.

Donations may be made at the local branch of the Royal Bank, Bank of Montreal, municipal hall and Esquimalt Leader. Closing date will be May 1.

Duncan started a fund with a $500 council donation and North Cowichan voted $1,000, pledging $4,000 more.

Alberni Local 1-85 International Woodworkers of America officers recommend the membership approve a $4,000 donation.

Benefits are planned to raise money in Greater Victoria Friday night at SANSCHIA Hall, Sidney, where a dance will be held at $1 a head admission, and April 19 in the Atlas Theatre, where a Sunday afternoon variety show will be held.

Provincial officials hope to start a province-wide car-testing program this summer.

The plan is to send a mobile crew around the province checking mechanical safety—brakes, lights, tires and other equipment.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner announced during the legislative session that the government was considering the idea to help promote safety on the highways.

Motor Vehicles Branch officials are now working out the details and plan to make a recommendation soon.

An official said it is hoped to have the first mobile unit on the road this summer.

At present there are no mobile units and only one permanent vehicle testing station in Vancouver.

It handles a tremendous volume of traffic, and issues windshield stickers to all approved cars.

If there is anything wrong with a car it is tagged with a rejection sticker and the driver is ordered to make repairs within a specific time and then get another inspection.

The city-operated Vancouver tests are compulsory, but it has not yet been decided if the mobile unit's testing will be, too, or whether it will be a system of spot checks.

This would depend on how long the mobile unit could stay in each community.

MacEachen Will Study Proposal

OTTAWA (CP)—Labor Minister MacEachen told the Commons today he will consider asking the marine union trustees to appear before a Commons committee to explain their policies for cleaning up labor lawlessness on the Great Lakes.

He said he would be "glad" to consider the idea, advanced by New Democratic Party Leader Douglas.

U.S. Will Not Press New Charge

SEATTLE (AP)—A conspiracy charge is still outstanding against John Wasylenchuk of Burnaby, in connection with a bank holdup and slaying here 10 years ago, but no immediate steps are planned to follow it up, Douglas Fryer, assistant U.S. attorney, said today.

A jury acquitted Wasylenchuk here Saturday of murder and robbery charges for the killing of a policeman in the holdup and he has returned to Canada.

Theft Still Baffles Police

VANCOUVER (CP)—Police have questioned four men, two of them prime suspects, in the $56,000 robbery of a National Employment Service office here, but have not been able to make an arrest.

A Vancouver detective is reported to have questioned two other men in Toronto.

Police say employees held at gunpoint by a bandit March 26 have been unable to pick out his picture.

Referee Didn't Hear Insults

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—Referee Frank Udvari of Kitchener said he did not hear Detroit Red Wing coach Sid Abel hurl insults at him from the bench during Sunday night's Stanley Cup semifinal game between the Wings and Chicago Black Hawks in Chicago. Hawks won 3-2.

Abel said he hurled insults at Udvari for the rest of the game but Udvari denied hearing them.

COLUMBIA PAYMENT

Canada Gaining
$100 Million

By ALEX YOUNG
Times Ottawa Bureau

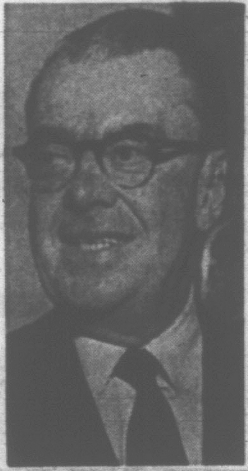

OTTAWA—External Affairs Minister Paul Martin today said Canada will get $100 million more for Columbia River development than the U.S. was prepared to pay 16 months ago.

He disclosed that the Americans made an offer to Canada in December, 1962, which came to about 3.75 mills per kilowatt hour for downstream power resulting from Canadian development of the international river.

The price settled on in the Canada-U.S. Columbia Treaty and its adjustments (4.4 mills for the power, or 5.3 mills if flood control benefits are added), was worth $100 million more to Canada, he said.

Mr. Martin made the statements in testimony before the Commons' external affairs committee. He appeared as the first witness as the committee began what is expected to be a lengthy and exhaustive inquiry into the treaty.

In launching the inquiry, committee chairman John Matheson (Liberal—Leeds) announced that David Fulton, justice minister in the former Conservative government and the man who negotiated the original treaty, would be invited to testify. Mr. Fulton is

Others to be invited to appear are: B.C. Attorney-General Robert Bonner, B.C. Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston, B.C. Hydro co-chairman Hugh Keenleyside, representatives of the Alberta and Saskatchewan governments—on the question of proposed Columbia diversion to the prairies, and four engineering firms which have done Columbia work.

CNR Sets New Volume Mark

OTTAWA (CP)—The publicly owned Canadian National Railways did more business in 1963 than ever before, achieving a record $800,000,000 in gross revenues on its railway, highway, hotel and telecommunications operations, CNR President Donald Gordon informed the Commons today.

In his annual report, tabled in the Commons by Transport Minister Pickersgill, Mr. Gordon said the CNR had a net income of $21,190,774 on its 1963 operations but debt charges pushed it into the hole.

MINISTER KILLED
UNDER BULLDOZERSteel Giants Indicted
On Price Fix

NEW YORK (UPI)—A federal grand jury today indicted eight major steel companies and two officials on charges of conspiring to fix prices by eliminating competition in the $3.6 billion carbon steel sheet industry.

The indictment was the result of an investigation started two years ago after the late president John F. Kennedy forced the steel industry to rescind a $6-a-ton price increase. It was the biggest anti-trust action since 29 large electrical companies were indicted on price-fixing charges in 1959, resulting in the sentencing of seven officials in 1961.

Pleading was set for April 21.

The indictment charged that meetings were held at the Biltmore and Sheraton hotels in New York to establish and carry out the price-fixing agreements.

Named were: United States Steel and James P. Barton, its assistant general manager; Bethlehem Steel and W. J. Stephens, its former assistant vice-president who now is president of Jones and Laughlin Steel; National Steel, Great Lakes Steel, Jones and Laughlin, Armco Steel, Republic Steel and Wheeling Steel.

These other companies were named as co-conspirators but were not indicted. They are Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co., Pittsburgh Steel Co. and Granite City Steel Co.

The indictment did not accuse the companies of fixing basic prices of sheet steel. It said only that they agreed on charges for so-called "extras" included in the price paid for specific orders.

These extra charges are for sheets of particular dimensions, gauge, quality, metallurgical content or processing requirements.

FORCED SHOWDOWN

The industry's attempt to raise the basic price of steel in the first week of April, 1962, brought about a showdown between Kennedy and U.S. steel board chairman Roger Blough.

Blough announced after a Kennedy blast at U.S. Steel and

'LITTLE SENTRY' AND 'TINY TATTLER'

Wiretappers Claimed Hard at Work

VANCOUVER (CP)—A retired RCMP sergeant said today wiretapping equipment is extensively used by RCMP and Vancouver police and by private detectives and individuals in divorce cases and in business and industry.

Ernest Nutall, 63, whose testimony helped acquit John Wasylenchuk of Burnaby, B.C., of second-degree murder charges in Seattle last week, said his own telephone was tapped.

"People have no idea of the extent of wire-tapping today," he said in an interview. "They would be amazed."

Nuttall said: Police secretly have telephone company officials make records of phone conversations;

Tiny microphone transmitters—some bearing such names as "Little Sentry" and "Tiny Tattler"—are used to bug hotel rooms; Induction coils put on or under telephones permit conversations to be recorded;

Spies eavesdrop on people at home by running wires off the house telephone lines.

A Vancouver newspaper says most of the 11 private investigators listed in the Vancouver directory are equipped to do wiretapping jobs. It says some even advertise "finest electronic equipment," "photo recording and electronic recording equipment" or "secret recordings for evidence."

Nuttall said Canada lacks adequate legislation restricting wiretapping.

He said he was "thunderstruck" to discover when giving a deposition that was used in the Wasylenchuk trial that his telephone had been tapped in the 1950s when he was being investigated by the RCMP at the request of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

He said he was also convinced that his telephone was tapped in the last month.

He said he was always against the use of the equipment. The RCMP had used it mostly on drug and security cases. RCMP and city police forces had men who spent most of their time on wire-tapping. Occasionally they would ask a private firm to do some of the work.

One investigator said it is common for businessmen who suspect pilfering on the part of employees to bug the premises. The employees' homes may even be bugged.

The man was also quoted as saying he knows of cases elsewhere in Canada where one manufacturer spies on another to find out about new products.

K Advises

MORTONVASAR (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev told Hungarian agricultural experts today not to boast about their achievements but to adopt some American farming methods.

The Soviet leader, on the eighth day of an official visit to Hungary, told the experts they should, for example, grow sweet corn as the Americans do.

"... They the Americans do it better and they grow much more than we Russians do," Khrushchev said. "They can it and make good meals out of it. Let us do the same and let us produce more sweet corn for human consumption and not only for fodder."

Crushed
At Site
Of School

CLEVELAND (AP)—A white minister, demonstrating with a civil rights group, threw himself under a self-unloader tractor at a school construction site today and was crushed by the treads of the big earth-moving machine.

Police said the man, whose chest was crushed, was dead when he reached Lakeside Hospital. They identified him as Rev. Bruce W. Klunder, Baker, Ore., who joined the staff of the Student Christian Union in the fall of 1961.

After the accident picketing stopped and so did movement of trucks and heavy equipment, but some shovelling continued.

The driver of the tractor identified by police as John White, 33, Mentor, Ohio, said his attention was distracted by demonstrators at the site.

CROWD OF 200

A crowd of about 200 gathered at the site of a new elementary school at Lakewood Road and Saywell Avenue on the east side about 12:30 p.m. to protest start of construction.

The protesting groups claim building a new school on the site will perpetuate what they describe as "de facto" school segregation in that area.

Less than an hour before the man was killed, police hauled away four men who had thrown themselves in front of the wheels of a cement truck. Some cans and bottles were thrown during this demonstration which occurred outside of the school site.

Monday, when the first demonstration took place, 22 demonstrators were arrested and charged with rioting.

Police said that just before White's tractor, a front-end loader, crushed the man, several of the demonstrators jumped on the moving vehicle and roughed White up.

As word of the accident spread through the shocked crowd, demonstrators quieted down considerably. A hurried call went in for additional police to augment a contingent of more than 30 who were on hand when 32 sign-carrying pickets began their march.

Fourteen helmeted mounted police had opened a path for four cement trucks to enter the site before the first flareup occurred. When the fifth truck tried to go in, four men from the crowd of spectators threw themselves in front of its wheels and were carried away by police to one of several waiting pad wagons.

SPACE STATION MUST GO
ZANZIBAR INFORMS U.S.

ZANZIBAR (Reuters)—President Abeid Karume today told American charge d'affaires Frank Carlucci that the American Project Mercury station must be removed from the island before the end of the month.

Karume said the movement must be made in the interests of the defence and security of Zanzibar.

He told Carlucci the action was the result of a statement made by American ambassador to Kenya, William Attwood, while in New York, which was clearly designed to bring about conflict between Zanzibar and the rest of East Africa.

Attwood told a press conference in New York last Thursday that China and East Germany were trying to turn Zanzibar "into a kind of non-African state to be used as a staging base for political manoeuvres" on the continent.

The Mercury tracking station in Zanzibar was established in 1960 as one of a series across the globe to assist in tracking the projected manned orbit of the earth.

If they do away with th' Senate there won't be as much Canada fer Quebec t' break away from.

FIRE HITS ABANDONED FERRY SLIP

NANAIMO — A disused CPR ferry slip at Nanose Bay was badly damaged by fire Monday night.

Cause of the blaze was not determined but it burned stubbornly for four hours before it was brought under control by Lantzville volunteer firemen.

The firemen had difficulty reaching the flames, which soared 30 feet and more above the crescent pilings of the old slip. On their way they had to place heavy planks across caved-in culverts on the access road.

The middle section of the slip, including a ramp and elevator, were destroyed.

Nanose Bay is about 15 miles northwest of here.

British Minister Attacks Modern Funeral Customs

NOTTINGHAM (Reuters)—Rev. Robert Duce, well-known British television broadcaster on religion, today attacked in his parish magazine Britain's "barbaric and pagan" funeral customs.

The Congregationalist minister condemned black cars, top hats, ornate coffins and "quite senseless" embalming.

"The way we perpetuate and linger over all the various stages of the burial ritual is primitive and quite unnecessary. Even the sending of flowers has become a mockery because they remain contained in cellophane packets—entombed in fact," he added.

ACCUSED MAN DRINKING ON DAY GIRL STABBED

NANAIMO—An Assize Court jury was told Monday that 43-year-old Robert Morley joined three other men in a wine-drinking party the day a 10-year-old Alert Bay girl was stabbed to death.

Morley, an Alert Bay hospital orderly, is charged with capital murder in the Nov. 7 death of Rosalind Louise Wadhams.

Witness Floyd Clark told the court he, Morley and two other men were drinking Nov. 7 at a cabin on a beach near Alert Bay.

GOV'T URGED TO BUY POTHOLE

SOOKE — Bob Gibson, president of the Sooke-Jordan River Chamber of Commerce, today urged the provincial parks branch to buy property around the Sooke River potholes for development into a recreational area.

"The chamber is concerned at the lack of parks from Sooke to Port Renfrew to cope with the needs of the expanding population south of the Malahat," he said. "Here in Sooke we need a park badly."

Property surrounding the potholes, situated three miles north of Milne's Landing, is privately owned.

But the owners have not prevented picnicking on the property.

FAVORITE PROPERTY

This section of the river, which includes natural ponds for swimming, has been for years a favorite place for weekend outings.

Mr. Gibson said the increasing population of Sooke, and the influx of visitors from Victoria, has created an acute park problem in Sooke.

This was further aggravated by the alienation of nearly all waterfront property from Sooke to Jordan River, he said.

He said the only park in the immediate area was Sooke Mountain Park, north of the village.

EXCHANGE

But he said the park will not be suitable for recreational use for many years as the native timber along Shields Lake was sold by the government in exchange for park land elsewhere.
